Flu shot demand increases in state

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State health officials began distributing more than 600,000 doses of swine flu vaccine today as public demand for immunization intensified following the first report of an apparent swine flu case in Missouri.

Meanwhile, state health laboratory personnel continued testing blood and virus specimens taken earlier this week from residents in Lafayette County, where a Concordia, Mo., telephone lineman is believed to have contracted and recovered from the swine flu last month.

A spokesman for the state Health Division's medical section said laboratory technicians had been working with the samples both on the Thanksgiving Day holiday and today, which was declared a state holiday also by Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

"You just can't hurry things like these tests," the spokesman said. Some of the blood and virus samples have also been sent to the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta for testing, he said. The samples were taken from persons in the Concordia area with respiratory ailments that showed outward symptoms similar to those experienced with swine flu. Preliminary indications are that the disease has not spread, officials have said.

State and federal health investigators wound up their on the-spot inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the apparent swine flu case in Concordia earlier this week.

The report that Larry Hardison, 32, had contracted and recovered from swine flu in mid October was the first report of the illness since a soldier at Fort Dix, N.J., died of the disease nine months ago. That death sparked a nationwide campaign for immunization against the swine flu in case it hit epidemic proportions this fall.

The case in western Missouri has increased public demand for vaccinations in Missouri, and state health officials were personnally distributing 320,000 doses of vaccine received in an emergency shipment along with another 300,000 already allotted to the state but shipped a week early.

Most of the emergency shipment will go to the metropolitan areas of the state, said James Donoho, director of the immunization drive. Prior to the report of Hardison's illness, demand for the vaccine in St. Louis and Kansas City had been lower than expected.

"But the response has really jumped," Donoho said. "We have reports from St. Louis and Kansas City that their walk-in clinics are setting all kinds of records. They're reporting three to five times the number of people as before."

Donoho said health officials in both cities have scheduled vaccination clinics this weekend to meet the increased demand.

"We really feel that this population is in greater need," he said of inner-city residents. "They would suffer more serious consequences from respiratory illness because of their general condition of health."

Was See-Mor's rate hike justified?

Council to check cable costs

The City Council Wednesday decided it wants to know the construction costs of the microwave link built by See-Mor Cable TV and whether or not those costs justify the $1 rate hike granted the firm in May.

The council gave See-Mor a $1 rate increase when the firm said it needed the money to build a microwave link costing $1.5 million.

The council took the action as it released $36,000 in an escrow account established as part of the rate hike agreement.

The rate hike money was placed in the escrow account until the firm had the microwave link built to bring additional channels from St. Louis. The link is now in operation.

Councilman Steve Sikes said he wanted to see the invoices on the construction to find out if the firm really needed the $1 increase.

Sikes wanted the council to withhold the escrow money until the firm complied with a cost-accounting of the construction, but other councilmen said that would violate the city's half of the agreement.

It was pointed out during the discussion that if See-Mor tries to withhold the information, the council can call a rate hearing and force the firm to release the data.

City Manager Charles Church also told the council that the Federal Communications Commission has established new requirements for cable tv regulation and that parts of the city cable ordinance will have to be drawn by March 1977.

The council also approved a request from downtown merchants not to enforce parking meter regulations on Saturdays until Christmas.

Auto theft, break-ins reported in Sikeston

Two burglaries and an auto theft were reported today by the Department of Public Safety.

Jeanie Beck, 301 Welter St., told officers that someone broke into her mobile home between 3 p.m. Thursday and 1:30 a.m. today.

Taken were a number of personal items with a value of $476.90. The burglars apparently got into the home through a kitchen door.

An automobile belonging to Troy Purkey was taken from the driveway of his home between 12:15 a.m. and 4:30 am. today.

In the car were a CB radio valued at $205, a .38 caliber revolver valued at $100 and two cases of ketchup worth $28.

3 major fires injure 10 in Bootheel

Ten firemen were injured in two separate fires in Cape Girardeau and Charleston Thursday night and four children were rescued from a burning house early today in Poplar Bluff.

Firemen were still on the scene at 10 a.m. this morning in Cape Girardeau where fire destroyed the Cape Cut-Rate Drug Store and damaged the Cape Hotel at 701 Broadway Ave.

The fire, which broke out at 11:47 p.m. Thursday, started near the furnace of the hotel and was burning at least 10 minutes before fire officials were called.

An unidentified couple who were passing by, noticed the fire and helped some of the estimated 20 residents of the Cape Hotel out of the blazing building.

Firemen arriving at the scene said the first floor was engulfed in flames and windows of the drugstore were shattered while residents of the hotel hung out of the windows.

Other residents were helped down by firemen using ladders. The first floor was destroyed but damage to the hotel, located on the second and third floors, was mostly limited to smoke and water.

Eight of the 41 Cape Girardeau firemen were injured.

Seven firemen were treated for smoke inhalation and released at St. Francis Hospital. One was admitted.

Capt. Calvin Lynch, who was treated for smoke inhalation remained under observation today.

Two women residents of the hotel were also treated for smoke inhalation and released. They were Vera Gentry and Ellen Herdich.

The fire was brought under control about 2:30 a.m. today.

In Poplar Bluff, a policeman rescued four children from a burning house early today.

Sgt. Chet Vaughn said he was on routine patrol at 4:30 a.m. when he saw smoke pouring from the rear of the house and stopped to investigate.

After he saw that the living room was engulfed in flames, Vaughn entered the home by the front door and was able to make out what appeared to be a lump on a living room couch.

Vaughn found three children on the sofa and helped them from the house, then went back into the burning structure after one of the children told him a baby was still inside.

The baby, a 2-year-old boy, was rescued from a bedroom.

Police identified the children as Mark Dye, 11, Steven, 6, and Lisa, 5. The name of the 2-year-old was not known.

Officers said the children's mother, Ruthie Mae Dye, was at a friend's home when the fire broke out and that the children were alone.

After the alarm was sounded, a city patrol car and a fire engine collided on the way to the scene and a patrolman in the police car was injured slightly. Another truck was sent to the home and the flames were extinguished.

An investigation into the cause of the fire was continuing.

In Charleston, two firemen, one a volunteer, were injured while fighting a fire Thursday night which threatened the two-story frame home of Perry Gillespie, 711 South Main St.

Fireman Paul Beard was admitted to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston for smoke inhalation and Timmy New, the volunteer, was treated at the hospital for inhalation and released.

The fire, which broke out about 4:30 p.m. Thursday, extensively damaged the second-story, but was prevented from spreading to the first floor by firemen who were on the scene until 10:10 p.m.

Origin of the fire was not determined.

The department was called at 1:45 p.m. Thursday to extinguish a grass fire at the James Byrd Home on North Main Road.

About 6 p.m. Wednesday they responded to a call to the Richard Pike farm north of town to another grass fire.

Two other fire runs were made Wednesday, but details were unavailable this morning.

New stores are planned

Construction on the rustic adobe-style building is expected to begin within the next few weeks. Completion is expected within three or four months. The real estate firm reports it is in the process of signing up stores for the building.

As a result, estate taxes have been pushed upward and many small businesses and family farms must be sold just to pay the tax bill to the federal government," Dole said.

Dole has introduced legislation which would increase the federal estate exemption level from $60,000 to $200,000. In addition, Dole's bill would force Internal Revenue Service agents to appraise the value of farmland on the basis of its current use rather than its development potential.

The House Ways and Means Committee, dominated by so-called tax reformers, chose to ignore the plight of the small businessman and farmer when it passed its tax reform bill last year, so Dole's bill will correct a wrong.

TAXING RETIREES

"...there is the general belief that the corporation income tax is a tax on the 'rich' and on the 'fat cats.' But with pension funds owning 30 per cent of American large business—and soon to own 50 per cent—the corporation income tax, in effect, eases the load on those in top income brackets and penalizes the benficiaries of pension funds. In many cases it means an effective tax of almost 50 per cent on the retired worker, compared with the 15 per cent or less that he is supposed to pay. The corporation income tax has become the most regressive tax in our system and a tax on the wage earner and on wages. Eliminating it would probably be the single largest step we could take toward greater equality of incomes in this country."

RALSTON'S PAYMENTS

In the Ralston Purina Company's explanation of the $154,000 in improper payments it made to foreign officials, a portion of one sentence deserves special prominence: "There will be no material adverse impact on its (Ralston's) business from the cessation of any questionable activity discovered.." Put another way, Ralston is stating that the payoffs were not particularly effective in increasing its business overseas.

Ralston's sales are in the billions of dollars. Set against that, the $154,000 is an almost microscopic figure. And, as the company statement declares, an unnecessary expense. Yet that expenditure has damaged the company's good name in a manner far out of proportion to its size. WHAT'S GOOD FOR GENERAL MOTORS

Detroit is watching the behavior of the automobile-buying public more closely than ever this year.

Will people go for the new slimmed-down Chevrolets, Olsmobiles, Pontiacs, Buicks and Cadillacs just introduced by General Motors, or will the industry's pace-setter lose sales to Ford and Chrysler, whose big cars remain unchanged in size for 1977? Will GM, in fact, be competing with itself since its intermediate models are not due for the same treatment until 1978?

The corporation is betting that its gamble will pay off, that Americans are ready for the kind of "full-size" family cars it says will have to become the standard if the industry is to meet government-mandated gasoline mileage guidelines—cars that are lighter, shorter, more economical and yet (as its heavy advertising campaign emphasizes) have as much or more interior room and trunk space, as well as the ride and performance Americans have become accustomed to.

"We expect the best fourth-quarter in history," says Robert D. Lund, general manager of Chevrolet, whose Caprice and Impala models are almost 11 inches shorter and 700 pounds lighter than their predecessors.

If so, it will signal a dramatic reversal of a trend which saw Americans, who seem to have forgotten all about high gasoline prices, snapping up big cars as fast as the industry could produce them this year. Only American Motors, whose largest model is classed as an intermediate, sold fewer cars in the 1976 model year than in 1975.

But whatever the final sales figures will be for 1977, the long-range future would seem to be on the side of General Motors.

"Something just had to be done," says Lund. "Cars were getting too big because of the government's demands for emission controls and safety improvements, such as door braces and bumpers. All of this added up to about 500 pounds to a car's weight and made it so long many people just couldn't get their cars into a garage."

Thus GM officials made the decision four years ago to redesign their big cars from scratch—to build-in safety, emission and, especially, economy requirements rather than continuing to add them on to existing designs. Their competitors must eventually do the same, they believe.

We think they're right. We even think this may be one case where what's good for General Motors is good for the country.

REPORT SAYS REAL, NOT 'SHADOW' JOBS NEEDED

A special panel of business leaders has just urged an all-out national effort to create more productive job opportunities. At the same time, it sharply criticized the performance of existing government programs dealing with unemployment.

This is the gist of a six-month study of the nation's unemployment situation by a 15-man task force of members of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Specifically, the report recommends 'an enlightened legislative program aimed at full employment''—one which will address itself to the creation of real job opportunities as opposed to "shadow" jobs. Focusing on one of the major issues in this fall's political campaigns, the report proposes:

Improvement of the business environment to enable the private sector to direct more funds into capital investment for new plant equipment, thereby expanding productive job opportunities.

It is estimated that under the present tax structure and policies, U.S. industry will be $400 billion short of the funds required in the next 10 years to reach needed expansion goals.

A thorough overhaul of government programs which, in effect, make it more lucrative for a person not to work than to take a job. The report points out: "Where payments to a household head in the form of unemployment compensation, food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children total $150 a week, there is little incentive for that person to take a job at the minimum wage, which amounts to $92 a week, or even a higher paying job."

More effective federal coordination of information on existing jobs in private industry, with greater emphasis on federal and state employment agencies matching industry job orders with people who can fill them.

Better management of federal programs in the field of manpower training. As an example of failures that must be corrected, the report says a person receiving unemployment compensation should not be cut off from benefits because he has enrolled in a training course.

Fuller support for training programs that have demonstrated effectiveness in manpower training and placement, such as those of the Urban League and the Opportunities Industrialization Center.

The NAM group stated it "disagrees with both the numerical goal stated and the approach to unemployment" contained in the Humphrey-Hawkins legislation before Congress. The bill would set up a mandatory governmental process to achieve "full employment"—defined as a jobless rate of no more than 3 per cent—within four years of enactment. It would have the government provide jobs for those not able to find work elsewhere.

"If there is any worthwhile gain to come from the recession we have recently undergone, it is the lesson learned that inflation is itself the cause of recession and its resultant unemployment. To launch once more upon a course of government spending heedless of the accompanying inflationary pressures is to invite further economic troubles," the NAM report on "Meeting the Unemployment Challenge" declares.

The report says legislative efforts aimed at reducing unemployment must recognize that a different approach should be taken to deal with short-term or cyclical unemployment as contrasted with building long-term employment opportunities. "In the event that there is a pressing need for limited programs of conventional public service jobs as an immediate and interim measure, they should be temporary in nature and should be designed to encourage the participants' entry into private sector employment," it says.

Terming its approach "comprehensive and constructive," the NAM Task Force urged "prompt Congressional action to restore a healthy and vigorous free enterprise economy with full employment to the American people."

Inside Labor

Reutherites, ADAers, Camelots of Old unite to win giant steel union for challenger

WASHINGTON— If you're an election buff and feel deprived during this political interregnum (as they're calling it) I have a presidential campaign for you replete with carnivals, Hollywood parties, beer hall patois, movie and TV performers, young ancients out of the long-ago Jack Kennedy camp, money raffles and intellectuals. In addition there are Sen. George McGovern's Americans for Democratic Action colleagues, earthy writers -- and Ralph Nader.

For the most part all this above is a profile of the rugged, extrovertted, open-shirted, tieless, sports-jacketed "bruggy" type. heavy-around-the-middle, self-avowed Don Quixonte, Ed Sadlowski, 39-year-old Chicago-Gary, Ind., District (31) steel union director.

He's bucking for the presidency of the 1.4 million-member $126.5 million United Steelworkers of America (AFL-CIO). Opposing him is St. Louis traditionalist, albeit militant, 60-year-old Lloyd McBride, director of the USWA's District 34.

Brother McBride is the gradualist -- the promulgator of the guaranteed lifetime security, meaning a permanent job. He dubs Sadlowski a "showboat." Indeed Sadlowski is a showman. And this might win for him. This giant steel union has a turbulent, often bloody, history. One of its former presidents rather smugly boasted recently he stole three elections. But he didn't boast of his relationship with a New York-area shadowy figure who openly consorted with the underworld.

But that's long ago and the canker was ripped out by the incumbent traditionalist president, lameduck I. W. (Abe) Abel. He's supporting the very solid McBride. And with Abe and McBride is the national AFL-CIO's president George Meany's heir-apparent, Lane Kirkland, who refers to Sadlowski as the campaigner with the "Actors' Studio role with ... dirty words to titillate intellectual types."

Sadlowski has tougher than "dirty" words for the current national labor chiefs. Ed, sort of a Midwest industrial Cesar Chavez (with more beef), bluntly charges that the labor movement and its leaders are fat, complacent and overpaid and should be proletarianized and reorganized into conglomerates. He warns that if he wins he'll get on the national AFL-CIO Executive Council, restructure it and push it to the left.

Bluntly Sadlowski says that there would not have been a Vietnam war if labor leader George Meany had said "no."

There's more here than a campaign which will wind up early next year with the membership voting in more than 6,000 union halls and polling places for the $75,000-a-year USWA presidency. There is enormous labor and industrial power in the steel union.

An aggressive steel union president could reshape the American labor movement and its traditionalist, non-collectivist philosophy. He could whip the vital steel industry back into its old, frequently violent confrontation days. He could crush the no-strike Experimental Negotiating Agreement (ENA) which has stablilized and brought peace to the industry.

If Sadlowski wins, and it could happen, there will be an inflow of left-wing thought which steel union veterans characterize as "Norman Thomas socialism."

There isn't the slightest insinuation of Communist taint.

Obviously the media coverage is concentrating on the visibility of the more colorful Sadlowski. He's the outside campaigner. His is the coalition of Nader, the ADA's vice president Joe Rauh the Hollywood crowd and the intellectual in-fighters of Kennedy's day such as Ted Sorenson and Camelot's Dick Goodwin, who was assigned to save Latin America for the good life.

And everywhere for Ed there is Victor Reugher, the last of the brothers. And everywhere there are the psyches, the techniques, the philosophy, the legendry of the old Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO); the emotional reaching to the past for the era of plant sitsowns and the yearning for the gearing of unions into latter-day Reutherite social action juggernauts.

There is public fund raising. Sadlowski claims he'll have some $200,000 to buck the incumbent-backed McBride ticket of five national officers by the time the Feb. 8 election day rolls around in 1977. This will be a critical moment in national steel industry labor negotiations.

The more seasoned McBride ticket claims it's raising $100,000 within the movement. McBride counters Sadlowski's slashing attacks with caution and sincere warnings that moderation, not open warfare on the American steel industry, will bring progress. He sees little value in national strikes, which in the past have destabilized production, built up huge pre-walkout inventories and created post-strike layoffs.

It's a tough stance to take against the colorful Sadlowski, the steel mill Jimmy Carter. There are large blocs of black and other minority workers, and ever-younger work force and strong ethnic groups. Traditionally these are anti-establishment.

Both men are going for broke. Money is pouring out for professional press agents, floods of new releases and posh hotel breakfasts and luncheons to brief the press and woo regional steel union leaders. Further, whoever loses surrenders his directorship of a big union district. He'll be out of a job.

So it's the hearty Ed Sadlowski, with gruff political sex appeal, with the "Reuther thrust" as his weapon, battling the traditionalist Lloyd McBride, carrying the burden of vast union incumbency strapped to his back. It's the middle-roader McBride against Sadlowski, the troubador, the candidate with the folk singer, the hum of old Wobbly songs filling the sparsely-attended halls. Labor Temples, Carl Sandburg used to call them.

Whoever wins the steel union presidency will sit at the tables of the mighty, in the White House Oval Office, in the national AFL-CIO high command board room.

So if you're an election buff, this is a campaign to ponder. Its result could shake the nation. And you can depend on that.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

MILITARY-INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

You would think that the people who are always complaining about the Defense Department budget would cheer if the Pentagon saves money. But no.

The recent announcement that the Defense Department underspent its budget by some $13 billion last year brought forth as much criticism as if it had overspent, plus demands to punish the Defense Department by reducing next year's budget.

Some commentators also used his announcement as an excuse to trot out the favorite left-wing cliche that President Eisenhower "warned about the military-industrial complex."

This is a classic example of taking a quotation out of context to misrepresent the author's meaning. The principal message of Eisenhower's farewell address of 1961 was his warning against the Soviet military threat: "We face a hostile ideology -- global in scope, atheistic in character, ruthless in purpose, and insidios in method ... A vital element in keeping the peace is our military establishment. Our arms must be mighty, ready for instant action, so that no potential aggressor may be tempted to risk his own destruction."

Based on this analysis, the Eisenhower administration initiated and funded the three great weapons systems that still defend us today: the Minuteman missiles, the Polaris submarines and the B-52 bombers.

Eisenhower gave another important warning in his farewell address about an entirely different group of power-seekers: "Yet in holding scientific research and discovery in respect, as we should, we must also be alert to the equal and opposite danger that public policy could itself become the captive of a scientific-technological elite."

The scientific-technological elite of which Eisenhower warned consisted principally of the men who attended the Pugwash Conferences, a series of semisecret meetings which take their name from Pubwash, Nova Scotia, the home of Cyrus Eaton, who hosted and bankrolled the first conference in 1957. Most of those who attend are Soviet and American nuclear scientists and government officials and advisers.

The organizer of Pugwash was Lord Bertrand Russell, author of the famous slogan, "Rather Red than dead," and that is an accurate summary of what the Pugwash Conferences are all about. Their long-range objective was to eliminate the Eisenhower strategy of defending America through military superiority and replace it with U.S. disarmament and accommodation of the Soviet Unioni.

Pugwashers worked toward this goal by articles written for prestigious journals and research studies financed through the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Two of the most notorious were the 1963 reports called "Phoenix Study" and "Study Fair."

As soon as Eisenhower left the White House, this elite flooded into government office. They successfully blocked all programs to build additional weapons over the ones Eisenhower had already ordered.

They canceled Eisenhower's plans for a second 1,000 Minuteman missiles. For 14 years they have been able to prevent the building of an advanced strategic bomber to replace the aging B-52s.

It is a great tragedy that Americans did not heed Eisenhower's warning against the scientific-techonological elite. This group did capture U.S. public policy, and today is still persuading our leader to persist in the folly of detente instead of meeting the challenge of reality.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Big Oil's Protectors

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The oil industry has plenty of protectors in Washington who are eager to demonstrate their devotion to oil and gas. Whether the oil barons seek large or small favors, the powers in Washington are usually ready to oblige.

The oil companies are constantly asking the federal regulators, for example, for special breaks. More often than not, the regulatory agencies have granted the requests. Here are some examples that we have dug out of government files:

— Several companies, including such giants as Gulf, Shell and Texaco, have asked the Transportation Dept. to waive safety regulations dealing with the shipment of hazardous substances. These have ranged from flammable gas to radioactive materials. Despite the public danger, many of these requests have been granted.

— The Interior Dept. is supposed to protect our shores from offshore oil contamination. Yet of 1,395 requests for offshore drilling waivers from the 10 largest oil companies, Interior has granted an incredible 1,314. Many of the waivers permitted the companies to ignore pollution controls, Interior officials told us.

— Mobil tried to get the Interstate Commerce Commission to lift the profit ceiling quietly on offshore oil pipeline operations. In this case, the ICC refused to deal with Mobil on the QT and directed the company to go through regular, open channels.

— Each of the Big Ten oil companies has also sought special treatment from the Federal Trade Commission. They have asked the FTC to quash requests for their corporate records, which the FTC has refused to do.

Spokesmen denied that the Transportation and Interior departments have given the oil companies special treatment. Each request for a waiver is judged on its merits, said the spokesmen for both departments.

Footnote: A skeptical Rep. John Moss, D.-Calif., is investigating charges that the regulatory agencies have given favored treatment to the oil companies. He has also challenged the industry's figures, showing it would hurt the economy to break up the oil giants.

According to Exxon's dire projection, for example, unemployment would jump over one million persons in three years and the nation's gross national product would decline by a staggering $86.8 billion. Standard Oil of Indiana came up with projections that are only slightly less harrowing.

Moss called upon government economists at the Library of Congress to double-check the industry's ominous calculations. In a confidential report, the experts have now concluded that the impact on the economy would be significantly less severe than the oil companies claim. They contend that unemployment would increase no more than 290,000 and that the economy would decline only $21.2 billion. Indeed, some economists believe that divestiture wouldn't hurt the economy at all.

Nuclear Fallout: It was the responsibility of the Environmental Protection Agency to safeguard the public from the recent radioactive clouds out of China.

But the EPA's warning system broke down when the first fallout drifted across the United States at the end of September.

The monitors failed to detect the first traces of radioactivity after they were washed to the ground by heavy rains. The fallout was discovered almost by accident when workers at the Peach Bottom, Pa., nuclear reactor picked up radiation on their wet feet.

The EPA knew that cows can eat wet, contaminated grass. Thus, there was danger that the radioactive poison would find its way into the milk supply in a matter of hours.

Yet the EPA neither sought out available weather forecasts nor warned farmers in advance of the possible threat to their milk. Two states, Connecticut and Massachusetts, reported the radiation levels had reached the dangerous level and, on their own, ordered cows taken off outdoor grass and put on stored feeds.

The EPA also neglected to notify the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that the Chinese fallout was on its way. As a result, NRC mistakenly concluded that the radioactivity at the Peach Bottom Reactor had been caused by "airborne effluent from building vents."

EPA also kept the public in the dark until October 5, a full week after it first learned of the impending fallout. The agency first found out about the extent of the radioactive contamination from Pennsylvania state officials. Not until then did the EPA rush out a belated press release.

Ralph Nader's watchdogs and Sen. Edward Kennedy's office were disturbed over the EPA's sluggish response to the first Chinese nuclear cloud. They raised such a howl that EPA handled the second radioactive fallout far more carefully. Alerts were put out in plenty of time to take the necessary precautions.

Sen. Bob Dole reports that reform of the unfair and antiquated federal estate tax should be the number one Congressional tax reform priority and is pushing for inclusion of estate tax relief in the tax revision bill now being considered by the Senate Finance Committee.

"The estate tax exemption level of $60,000 has not been changed since 1942, despite the fact that inflation has greatly increased property values. As a result, estate taxes have been pushed upward and many small businesses and family farms must be sold just to pay the tax bill to the federal government," Dole said.

Dole has introduced legislation which would increase the federal estate exemption level from $60,000 to $200,000. In addition, Dole's bill would force Internal Revenue Service agents to appraise the value of farmland on the basis of its current use rather than its development potential.

The House Ways and Means Committee, dominated by so-called tax reformers, chose to ignore the plight of the small businessman and farmer when it passed its tax reform bill last year, so Dole's bill will correct a wrong.

A special panel of business leaders has just urged an all-out national effort to create more productive job opportunities. At the same time, it sharply criticized the performance of existing government programs dealing with unemployment.

This is the gist of a six-month study of the nation's unemployment situation by a 15-man task force of members of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Specifically, the report recommends 'an enlightened legislative program aimed at full employment''—one which will address itself to the creation of real job opportunities as opposed to "shadow" jobs. Focusing on one of the major issues in this fall's political campaigns, the report proposes:

Improvement of the business environment to enable the private sector to direct more funds into capital investment for new plant equipment, thereby expanding productive job opportunities.

It is estimated that under the present tax structure and policies, U.S. industry will be $400 billion short of the funds required in the next 10 years to reach needed expansion goals.

A thorough overhaul of government programs which, in effect, make it more lucrative for a person not to work than to take a job. The report points out: "Where payments to a household head in the form of unemployment compensation, food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children total $150 a week, there is little incentive for that person to take a job at the minimum wage, which amounts to $92 a week, or even a higher paying job."

More effective federal coordination of information on existing jobs in private industry, with greater emphasis on federal and state employment agencies matching industry job orders with people who can fill them.

Better management of federal programs in the field of manpower training. As an example of failures that must be corrected, the report says a person receiving unemployment compensation should not be cut off from benefits because he has enrolled in a training course.

Fuller support for training programs that have demonstrated effectiveness in manpower training and placement, such as those of the Urban League and the Opportunities Industrialization Center.

The NAM group stated it "disagrees with both the numerical goal stated and the approach to unemployment" contained in the Humphrey-Hawkins legislation before Congress. The bill would set up a mandatory governmental process to achieve "full employment"—defined as a jobless rate of no more than 3 per cent—within four years of enactment. It would have the government provide jobs for those not able to find work elsewhere.

"If there is any worthwhile gain to come from the recession we have recently undergone, it is the lesson learned that inflation is itself the cause of recession and its resultant unemployment. To launch once more upon a course of government spending heedless of the accompanying inflationary pressures is to invite further economic troubles," the NAM report on "Meeting the Unemployment Challenge" declares.

The report says legislative efforts aimed at reducing unemployment must recognize that a different approach should be taken to deal with short-term or cyclical unemployment as contrasted with building long-term employment opportunities. "In the event that there is a pressing need for limited programs of conventional public service jobs as an immediate and interim measure, they should be temporary in nature and should be designed to encourage the participants' entry into private sector employment," it says.

Terming its approach "comprehensive and constructive," the NAM Task Force urged "prompt Congressional action to restore a healthy and vigorous free enterprise economy with full employment to the American people."

P.S. TO THE NEWS

MILITARY-INDUSTRIAL COMPLEX

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

You would think that the people who are always complaining about the Defense Department budget would cheer if the Pentagon saves money. But no.

The recent announcement that the Defense Department underspent its budget by some $13 billion last year brought forth as much criticism as if it had overspent, plus demands to punish the Defense Department by reducing next year's budget.

Some commentators also used his announcement as an excuse to trot out the favorite left-wing cliche that President Eisenhower "warned about the military-industrial complex."

This is a classic example of taking a quotation out of context to misrepresent the author's meaning. The principal message of Eisenhower's farewell address of 1961 was his warning against the Soviet military threat: "We face a hostile ideology -- global in scope, atheistic in character, ruthless in purpose, and insidios in method ... A vital element in keeping the peace is our military establishment. Our arms must be mighty, ready for instant action, so that no potential aggressor may be tempted to risk his own destruction."

Based on this analysis, the Eisenhower administration initiated and funded the three great weapons systems that still defend us today: the Minuteman missiles, the Polaris submarines and the B-52 bombers.

Eisenhower gave another important warning in his farewell address about an entirely different group of power-seekers: "Yet in holding scientific research and discovery in respect, as we should, we must also be alert to the equal and opposite danger that public policy could itself become the captive of a scientific-technological elite."

The scientific-technological elite of which Eisenhower warned consisted principally of the men who attended the Pugwash Conferences, a series of semisecret meetings which take their name from Pubwash, Nova Scotia, the home of Cyrus Eaton, who hosted and bankrolled the first conference in 1957. Most of those who attend are Soviet and American nuclear scientists and government officials and advisers.

The organizer of Pugwash was Lord Bertrand Russell, author of the famous slogan, "Rather Red than dead," and that is an accurate summary of what the Pugwash Conferences are all about. Their long-range objective was to eliminate the Eisenhower strategy of defending America through military superiority and replace it with U.S. disarmament and accommodation of the Soviet Unioni.

Pugwashers worked toward this goal by articles written for prestigious journals and research studies financed through the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Two of the most notorious were the 1963 reports called "Phoenix Study" and "Study Fair."

As soon as Eisenhower left the White House, this elite flooded into government office. They successfully blocked all programs to build additional weapons over the ones Eisenhower had already ordered.

They canceled Eisenhower's plans for a second 1,000 Minuteman missiles. For 14 years they have been able to prevent the building of an advanced strategic bomber to replace the aging B-52s.

It is a great tragedy that Americans did not heed Eisenhower's warning against the scientific-techonological elite. This group did capture U.S. public policy, and today is still persuading our leader to persist in the folly of detente instead of meeting the challenge of reality.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Reutherites, ADAers, Camelots of Old unite to win giant steel union for challenger

WASHINGTON— If you're an election buff and feel deprived during this political interregnum (as they're calling it) I have a presidential campaign for you replete with carnivals, Hollywood parties, beer hall patois, movie and TV performers, young ancients out of the long-ago Jack Kennedy camp, money raffles and intellectuals. In addition there are Sen. George McGovern's Americans for Democratic Action colleagues, earthy writers – and Ralph Nader.

For the most part all this above is a profile of the rugged, extrovertted, open-shirted, tieless, sports-jacketed "bruggy" type. heavy-around-the-middle, self-avowed Don Quixonte, Ed Sadlowski, 39-year-old Chicago-Gary, Ind., District (31) steel union director.

He's bucking for the presidency of the 1.4 million-member $126.5 million United Steelworkers of America (AFL-CIO). Opposing him is St. Louis traditionalist, albeit militant, 60-year-old Lloyd McBride, director of the USWA's District 34.

Brother McBride is the gradualist -- the promulgator of the guaranteed lifetime security, meaning a permanent job. He dubs Sadlowski a "showboat." Indeed Sadlowski is a showman. And this might win for him. This giant steel union has a turbulent, often bloody, history. One of its former presidents rather smugly boasted recently he stole three elections. But he didn't boast of his relationship with a New York-area shadowy figure who openly consorted with the underworld.

But that's long ago and the canker was ripped out by the incumbent traditionalist president, lameduck I. W. (Abe) Abel. He's supporting the very solid McBride. And with Abe and McBride is the national AFL-CIO's president George Meany's heir-apparent, Lane Kirkland, who refers to Sadlowski as the campaigner with the "Actors' Studio role with ... dirty words to titillate intellectual types."

Sadlowski has tougher than "dirty" words for the current national labor chiefs. Ed, sort of a Midwest industrial Cesar Chavez (with more beef), bluntly charges that the labor movement and its leaders are fat, complacent and overpaid and should be proletarianized and reorganized into conglomerates. He warns that if he wins he'll get on the national AFL-CIO Executive Council, restructure it and push it to the left.

Bluntly Sadlowski says that there would not have been a Vietnam war if labor leader George Meany had said "no."

There's more here than a campaign which will wind up early next year with the membership voting in more than 6,000 union halls and polling places for the $75,000-a-year USWA presidency. There is enormous labor and industrial power in the steel union.

An aggressive steel union president could reshape the American labor movement and its traditionalist, non-collectivist philosophy. He could whip the vital steel industry back into its old, frequently violent confrontation days. He could crush the no-strike Experimental Negotiating Agreement (ENA) which has stablilized and brought peace to the industry.

If Sadlowski wins, and it could happen, there will be an inflow of left-wing thought which steel union veterans characterize as "Norman Thomas socialism."

There isn't the slightest insinuation of Communist taint.

Obviously the media coverage is concentrating on the visibility of the more colorful Sadlowski. He's the outside campaigner. His is the coalition of Nader, the ADA's vice president Joe Rauh the Hollywood crowd and the intellectual in-fighters of Kennedy's day such as Ted Sorenson and Camelot's Dick Goodwin, who was assigned to save Latin America for the good life.

And everywhere for Ed there is Victor Reugher, the last of the brothers. And everywhere there are the psyches, the techniques, the philosophy, the legendry of the old Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO); the emotional reaching to the past for the era of plant sitsowns and the yearning for the gearing of unions into latter-day Reutherite social action juggernauts.

There is public fund raising. Sadlowski claims he'll have some $200,000 to buck the incumbent-backed McBride ticket of five national officers by the time the Feb. 8 election day rolls around in 1977. This will be a critical moment in national steel industry labor negotiations.

The more seasoned McBride ticket claims it's raising $100,000 within the movement. McBride counters Sadlowski's slashing attacks with caution and sincere warnings that moderation, not open warfare on the American steel industry, will bring progress. He sees little value in national strikes, which in the past have destabilized production, built up huge pre-walkout inventories and created post-strike layoffs.

It's a tough stance to take against the colorful Sadlowski, the steel mill Jimmy Carter. There are large blocs of black and other minority workers, and ever-younger work force and strong ethnic groups. Traditionally these are anti-establishment.

Both men are going for broke. Money is pouring out for professional press agents, floods of new releases and posh hotel breakfasts and luncheons to brief the press and woo regional steel union leaders. Further, whoever loses surrenders his directorship of a big union district. He'll be out of a job.

So it's the hearty Ed Sadlowski, with gruff political sex appeal, with the "Reuther thrust" as his weapon, battling the traditionalist Lloyd McBride, carrying the burden of vast union incumbency strapped to his back. It's the middle-roader McBride against Sadlowski, the troubador, the candidate with the folk singer, the hum of old Wobbly songs filling the sparsely-attended halls. Labor Temples, Carl Sandburg used to call them.

Whoever wins the steel union presidency will sit at the tables of the mighty, in the White House Oval Office, in the national AFL-CIO high command board room.

So if you're an election buff, this is a campaign to ponder. Its result could shake the nation. And you can depend on that.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Big Oil's Protectors

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The oil industry has plenty of protectors in Washington who are eager to demonstrate their devotion to oil and gas. Whether the oil barons seek large or small favors, the powers in Washington are usually ready to oblige.

The oil companies are constantly asking the federal regulators, for example, for special breaks. More often than not, the regulatory agencies have granted the requests. Here are some examples that we have dug out of government files:

— Several companies, including such giants as Gulf, Shell and Texaco, have asked the Transportation Dept. to waive safety regulations dealing with the shipment of hazardous substances. These have ranged from flammable gas to radioactive materials. Despite the public danger, many of these requests have been granted.

— The Interior Dept. is supposed to protect our shores from offshore oil contamination. Yet of 1,395 requests for offshore drilling waivers from the 10 largest oil companies, Interior has granted an incredible 1,314. Many of the waivers permitted the companies to ignore pollution controls, Interior officials told us.

— Mobil tried to get the Interstate Commerce Commission to lift the profit ceiling quietly on offshore oil pipeline operations. In this case, the ICC refused to deal with Mobil on the QT and directed the company to go through regular, open channels.

— Each of the Big Ten oil companies has also sought special treatment from the Federal Trade Commission. They have asked the FTC to quash requests for their corporate records, which the FTC has refused to do.

Spokesmen denied that the Transportation and Interior departments have given the oil companies special treatment. Each request for a waiver is judged on its merits, said the spokesmen for both departments.

Footnote: A skeptical Rep. John Moss, D.-Calif., is investigating charges that the regulatory agencies have given favored treatment to the oil companies. He has also challenged the industry's figures, showing it would hurt the economy to break up the oil giants.

According to Exxon's dire projection, for example, unemployment would jump over one million persons in three years and the nation's gross national product would decline by a staggering $86.8 billion. Standard Oil of Indiana came up with projections that are only slightly less harrowing.

Moss called upon government economists at the Library of Congress to double-check the industry's ominous calculations. In a confidential report, the experts have now concluded that the impact on the economy would be significantly less severe than the oil companies claim. They contend that unemployment would increase no more than 290,000 and that the economy would decline only $21.2 billion. Indeed, some economists believe that divestiture wouldn't hurt the economy at all.

Nuclear Fallout: It was the responsibility of the Environmental Protection Agency to safeguard the public from the recent radioactive clouds out of China.

But the EPA's warning system broke down when the first fallout drifted across the United States at the end of September.

The monitors failed to detect the first traces of radioactivity after they were washed to the ground by heavy rains. The fallout was discovered almost by accident when workers at the Peach Bottom, Pa., nuclear reactor picked up radiation on their wet feet.

The EPA knew that cows can eat wet, contaminated grass. Thus, there was danger that the radioactive poison would find its way into the milk supply in a matter of hours.

Yet the EPA neither sought out available weather forecasts nor warned farmers in advance of the possible threat to their milk. Two states, Connecticut and Massachusetts, reported the radiation levels had reached the dangerous level and, on their own, ordered cows taken off outdoor grass and put on stored feeds.

The EPA also neglected to notify the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that the Chinese fallout was on its way. As a result, NRC mistakenly concluded that the radioactivity at the Peach Bottom Reactor had been caused by "airborne effluent from building vents."

EPA also kept the public in the dark until October 5, a full week after it first learned of the impending fallout. The agency first found out about the extent of the radioactive contamination from Pennsylvania state officials. Not until then did the EPA rush out a belated press release.

Ralph Nader's watchdogs and Sen. Edward Kennedy's office were disturbed over the EPA's sluggish response to the first Chinese nuclear cloud. They raised such a howl that EPA handled the second radioactive fallout far more carefully. Alerts were put out in plenty of time to take the necessary precautions.

"more spice than everything nice"

1st female governor to be-100 Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nellie Tayloe Ross, who served as the nation's first woman governor, turns 100 on Monday and says she's touched by the many birthday letters she's received from Wyoming schoolchildren.

"The best thing I could do for the women's cause at the time was to do a good job as governor and afterwards. I wanted to show that women could take the responsibility and do well," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Ross said her two years as Wyoming's governor after her election in 1924 even eclipsed in importance the 20 years she was director of the U.S. Mint.

Mrs. Ross, who lives in Washington, hasn't been in Wyoming since 1972 when she attended the centennial celebration of Yellowstone National Park.

But the bundles of letters that have arrived daily this month wishing her a "happy birthday" serve as a reminder of her strong ties to the Equality State.

"They touch me a great deal," she said of the birthday letters. "It makes me happy that they think of me."

After serving as cochairman of the Democratic National Committee in the early 1930s, she was named director of the U.S. Mint in 1933, the first woman to hold the office. She retired in 1953.

Mrs. Ross said she doesn't think she equaled the accomplishments of suffragette Carrie Nation, but she believes her career marked a milestone in the battle for women's equality.

Women's rights champions, however, claimed that Mrs. Ross failed to advance the women's cause as governor, and their criticism contributed to her defeat in a 1926 re-election bid.

She had been catapulted into politics in October 1924 when her husband, Gov. William B. Ross, died. Mrs. Ross, who had not been active in politics, was persuaded by Democrats to seek the office in the November election. She declined to campaign, but the chivalry and sympathy of Wyoming voters helped Mrs. Ross win the election.

Although Mrs. Ross was elected the same day that Ma Ferguson won the governorship of Texas, Wyoming gained the distinction of having the first woman governor because its inauguration was held three weeks before Texas'.

Schoolboy finds shipwreck, coins from 14th century

COPENHAGEN (AP) — It was every schoolboy's dream come true. A sandy beach and a wrecked ship — packed with gold coins.

A Danish schoolboy, Jesper Egersoe, 16, found the ship — not on some palm-fringed coral strand, but right at home in Denmark.

His find won the amateur archeologist local fame and a reward.

Jesper found the remains of a 14th-century trading vessel in the water near his family's summer cottage on the west coast of the island of Zealand while diving with a simple mask and snorkel. In the summer of 1975 he fished up an antique pewter plate, which he sent to the Danish National Museum. This summer he made the big catch — 94 gold coins.

To keep away vandals, Jesper kept his find a secret, except for telling his parents and the National Museum, which sent professional searchers to the spot. They found a further 16 coins, pewter plates, part of a bronze cooking pot, sailcloth and some textiles.

There were remains of animal bones, possibly from the last meal for the crew before the ship foundered on the Danish coast near the Skaggerak. It was probably on its way to the Baltic for trading.

Archeologists identified the coins as English nobles minted in the reign of Edward III (1327-77). There were 74 nobles, 30 halves and four quarters. None was from the time of Edward's successor, Richard II, making the wreck at least 600 years old. There was one gold gulden from Luebeck, Germany and a silver coin from Flanders, Belgium.

The truth about men

By ERMA BOMBECK

A survey has just revealed that men in their 40s are found by young women to be the "most attractive of any age group."

"If I had known you were going to be 'in' this year," I told my husband, "I'd have cleaned you up and put you up on the mantle."

"Don't be testy," he said. "It's a fact of life. The mature man has always been unmercifully attractive."

"There are just a few things I would like explained about the 'mature man,' " I said, whipping out a list. "It has to do with semantics."

A man's grey hair is "distinguished."

A woman's hair that comes out of the same bottle is "washed out."

Glasses on a man mke him intelligent.

Glasses on a woman make her blind.

When a man is muscular he is strong.

When a woman is muscular, she's gone to pot.

If a man doesn't talk, he's thinking.

If a woman doesn't talk, she's dumb.

When a man limps, it's an old war wound.

When a woman limps, she's getting old.

A man gets wrinkles because he earned them.

A woman gets wrinkles because she asked for them.

When a man forgets something he's preoccupied.

When a woman forgets something, she's flaky.

When a man gets crabby, it's called impatience.

When a woman gets crabby, it's called irregularities.

A man asks you to repeat something because he can't believe he heard it the first time.

A woman asks you to repeat something because she's hard of hearing.

"Those are sexist remarks," said my husband. "But I forgive you for them. After all, how many people have a real sex object taking out the garbage every night?"

"Or vice versa," I said.

"My dear," he continued, "just remember that beauty is only skin deep."

I hate that remark. I mean, how far down does it have to go?

Bright wife flunks homemaking skills

Dear Ann Landers: My youngest brother, Dennis, waited until he was 38 years of age to marry and then he selected a woman who has a master's degree but doesn't know enough not to put a wet towel on a mahogany table.

I can't stand to see the way his "brilliant" wife cooks and keeps house. She boils the vegetables until they are mushy. When she serves steaks they are either burnt to a crisp or bleeding.

Dennis lived with me until he married. Every shirt I ironed looked like it was brand new. Now he wears the same shirt three days and he looks like a panhandler. His wife probably never heard of a needle and thread. Last night when they came here for dinner, Dennis's cuff was pinned together. No button.

Should I offer to teach the women a few things? My dear brother never utters one word of complaint. He is so in love he's unconscious. What is your advice, Ann? I'll do as you say. -- A Sad Sister

Dear Sis: MYOB, dearie. If Dennis is happy the way things are, that's all that matters. Perhaps when the newness of his marriage wears off he will be less starry-eyed and his vision will improve.

Your well-meaning offer to help may be interpreted as criticism or worse yet, interference. It might even make you persona non grata -- which means "plenty unwelcome" as the girl with the master's degree will explain.

Dear Ann: I'll cut the gobbledegook and get to the problem. I'm 54, married and own my own business. I have good insight into my problems (booze is No. 1) and am well aware that the tyranny of a ruthless father damaged me emotionally at an early age.

A very pretty 23-year-old woman works in my office. Lois is unmarried but confided that she had a "heavenly affair" with a fast-talking chap who promised marriage, then scrammed. She lives at home with a timid mouse of a mother and a punitive, domineering father (like mine). He has filled Lois with the fear of hellfire and damnation since he learned of her affair (by accident) and refuses to let her forget it.

You may not believe this, Ann, but I see the same pressures building up in this girl's life that ruined mine. My primary concern is to help Lois become a well-adjusted person. She is a normal woman who needs a normal outlet. I must admit that I would benefit from a romantic liaison also, since my wife is a bit of a bore and complains of recurring back trouble.

I am writing to you because I think you are a practical and realistic person who will give me some up-to-date advice. A letter (or even a Confidential at the end of your column) saying, "O.K., Bub," would help a lot. Thank you. -- Synergistic Male In Houston

Dear Syn: Mighty generous of you to want to help the girl out, but an affair with a married alcoholic (old enough to be her father, yet) is not my idea of "a normal outlet." All I can see is more trouble -- for HER.

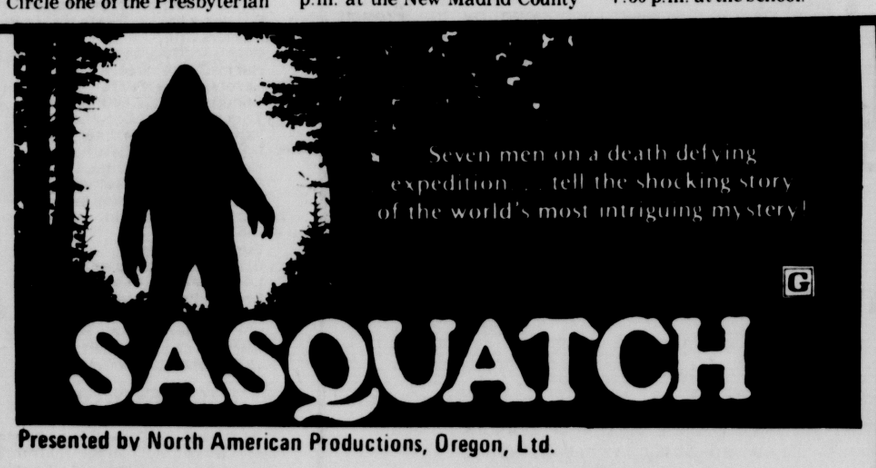

Lois needs the courage to break away from her family. If you REALLY want to help, urge her to make an appointment with a therapist. The County or State Mental Health groups in Houston are excellent.

2 cups milk
4 large eggs
Tabasco sauce to taste

In a 2-quart buttered round glass casserole (8¼ by 2¾ inches) layer ½ the bread, ham and cheese; layer the remaining bread, ham and cheese. In a small bowl stir together the flour and mustard; gradually stir in the milk, keeping smooth. In a medium bowl beat eggs slightly; add milk and tabasco and beat to blend; pour over ingredients in casserole. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until browned and a knife inserted in center comes out clean — 45 minutes. Remove from oven and let stand 5 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

Wedding to come

Waldman-Lewis

Barbara Ann Waldman

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Waldman, 114 North St., announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Ann, to Michael E. Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilburn E. Lewis of Prattville, Ala.

Miss Walkman is a 1973 graduate of Sikeston High School and a junior at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

Lewis, a 1975 graduate of Troy University at Troy, Ala., is employed as an accountant for Blunt Brothers Construction Co. in Massachusetts.

The couple plans to be married Dec. 30.

Legend has it that left-handed President James A. Garfield had sufficiently trained his right hand so that he could write Latin with one hand while he wrote in Greek with the other.

Schoolboy finds shipwreck, coins from 14th century

COPENHAGEN (AP) — It was every schoolboy's dream come true. A sandy beach and a wrecked ship — packed with gold coins.

A Danish schoolboy, Jesper Egersoe, 16, found the ship — not on some palm-fringed coral strand, but right at home in Denmark.

His find won the amateur archeologist local fame and a reward.

Jesper found the remains of a 14th-century trading vessel in the water near his family's summer cottage on the west coast of the island of Zealand while diving with a simple mask and snorkel. In the summer of 1975 he fished up an antique pewter plate, which he sent to the Danish National Museum. This summer he made the big catch — 94 gold coins.

To keep away vandals, Jesper kept his find a secret, except for telling his parents and the National Museum, which sent professional searchers to the spot. They found a further 16 coins, pewter plates, part of a bronze cooking pot, sailcloth and some textiles.

There were remains of animal bones, possibly from the last meal for the crew before the ship foundered on the Danish coast near the Skaggerak. It was probably on its way to the Baltic for trading.

Archeologists identified the coins as English nobles minted in the reign of Edward III (1327-77). There were 74 nobles, 30 halves and four quarters. None was from the time of Edward's successor, Richard II, making the wreck at least 600 years old. There was one gold gulden from Luebeck, Germany and a silver coin from Flanders, Belgium.

At wit's end

The truth about men

By ERMA BOMBECK

A survey has just revealed that men in their 40s are found by young women to be the "most attractive of any age group."

"If I had known you were going to be 'in' this year," I told my husband, "I'd have cleaned you up and put you up on the mantle."

"Don't be testy," he said. "It's a fact of life. The mature man has always been unmercifully attractive."

"There are just a few things I would like explained about the 'mature man,' " I said, whipping out a list. "It has to do with semantics."

A man's grey hair is "distinguished."

A woman's hair that comes out of the same bottle is "washed out."

Glasses on a man mke him intelligent.

Glasses on a woman make her blind.

When a man is muscular he is strong.

When a woman is muscular, she's gone to pot.

If a man doesn't talk, he's thinking.

If a woman doesn't talk, she's dumb.

When a man limps, it's an old war wound.

When a woman limps, she's getting old.

A man gets wrinkles because he earned them.

A woman gets wrinkles because she asked for them.

When a man forgets something he's preoccupied.

When a woman forgets something, she's flaky.

When a man gets crabby, it's called impatience.

When a woman gets crabby, it's called irregularities.

A man asks you to repeat something because he can't believe he heard it the first time.

A woman asks you to repeat something because she's hard of hearing.

"Those are sexist remarks," said my husband. "But I forgive you for them. After all, how many people have a real sex object taking out the garbage every night?"

"Or vice versa," I said.

"My dear," he continued, "just remember that beauty is only skin deep."

I hate that remark. I mean, how far down does it have to go?

Ann Landers

Bright wife flunks homemaking skills

Dear Ann Landers: My youngest brother, Dennis, waited until he was 38 years of age to marry and then he selected a woman who has a master's degree but doesn't know enough not to put a wet towel on a mahogany table.

I can't stand to see the way his "brilliant" wife cooks and keeps house. She boils the vegetables until they are mushy. When she serves steaks they are either burnt to a crisp or bleeding.

Dennis lived with me until he married. Every shirt I ironed looked like it was brand new. Now he wears the same shirt three days and he looks like a panhandler. His wife probably never heard of a needle and thread. Last night when they came here for dinner, Dennis's cuff was pinned together. No button.

Should I offer to teach the women a few things? My dear brother never utters one word of complaint. He is so in love he's unconscious. What is your advice, Ann? I'll do as you say. -- A Sad Sister

Dear Sis: MYOB, dearie. If Dennis is happy the way things are, that's all that matters. Perhaps when the newness of his marriage wears off he will be less starry-eyed and his vision will improve.

Your well-meaning offer to help may be interpreted as criticism or worse yet, interference. It might even make you persona non grata -- which means "plenty unwelcome" as the girl with the master's degree will explain.

Dear Ann: I'll cut the gobbledegook and get to the problem. I'm 54, married and own my own business. I have good insight into my problems (booze is No. 1) and am well aware that the tyranny of a ruthless father damaged me emotionally at an early age.

A very pretty 23-year-old woman works in my office. Lois is unmarried but confided that she had a "heavenly affair" with a fast-talking chap who promised marriage, then scrammed. She lives at home with a timid mouse of a mother and a punitive, domineering father (like mine). He has filled Lois with the fear of hellfire and damnation since he learned of her affair (by accident) and refuses to let her forget it.

You may not believe this, Ann, but I see the same pressures building up in this girl's life that ruined mine. My primary concern is to help Lois become a well-adjusted person. She is a normal woman who needs a normal outlet. I must admit that I would benefit from a romantic liaison also, since my wife is a bit of a bore and complains of recurring back trouble.

I am writing to you because I think you are a practical and realistic person who will give me some up-to-date advice. A letter (or even a Confidential at the end of your column) saying, "O.K., Bub," would help a lot. Thank you. -- Synergistic Male In Houston

Dear Syn: Mighty generous of you to want to help the girl out, but an affair with a married alcoholic (old enough to be her father, yet) is not my idea of "a normal outlet." All I can see is more trouble -- for HER.

Lois needs the courage to break away from her family. If you REALLY want to help, urge her to make an appointment with a therapist. The County or State Mental Health groups in Houston are excellent.

Can drugs be a friend in time of stress? If you keep your head together can they be of help? Ann Landers's new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs" separates the fact from the fiction. Get it today. For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (24 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Shoppers take cylinders, leave new boxes on shelf

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cylinders just aren't worth their salt anymore as containers, some manufacturers say. They're switching to rectangular boxes to save space on supermarket shelves.

But some shoppers appear reluctant to give up the sturdy, round cardboards that children have used for play telephones and grade school art projects.

Earlier this month, Leslie Salt Co. of Fremont and Safeway food stores of Oakland started packaging sodium chloride in boxes.

"Boxes fit neatly on grocery and household shelves, whereas cylinders leave space where corners would be," said Ron Murphy, vice president of Leslie. "Market research indicates that shoppers will buy boxes once they become used to them."

The cylindrical cartons — three layers of cardboard wrapped around an asphalt liner — were introduced before World War I, because the boxes of that era weren't considered strong enough.

Morton, one of Leslie's competitors, says it doubts that the boxes of 1976 are strong enough either.

"They look like sugar boxes," said Morton's Northern Californian manager, Clem Teeters. "Boxes just aren't strong enough to prevent leaks, given the usual handling they receive.

"On the other hand, if you're under 200 pounds and you step lightly on one of our cylinders, it doesn't cave in. That's good packaging."

At one Safeway store here, manager Bob Young predicted it will "take shoppers a long time to break an old habit. Look at the shelf."

The Morton cylinders were sold out, while on either side were boxes of other brands of salt.

Russian men blast 'liberated' women

MOSCOW (AP) — The journal Literary Gazette says dozens of irate men have written to complain that liberated Soviet women are losing their femininity and acting like men in their smoking, drinking, cursing and having free sex.

In fact, the Soviet Union's new breed of working women have forgotten how to be women, the weekly newspaper's readers said in the latest issue.

"Every man dreams of a woman who's soft, loving, expressive, affectionate, modest and shy, of a feminine woman," wrote Grigory Molodtsov from the town of Volzhsky. "But they're getting harder and harder to find.

"Men are getting fed up with crude women who have the manners of cowboys. Their bossy shouts around the house, their shabby way of dressing and their swaggering way of drinking bottoms-up like a man turns the home into a crude barracks."

Even at the front in World War II, wrote A. Arkilov from Nikolayev, girls wearing boots and greatcoats managed to keep their femininity.

But now, he said, "it's hard to distinguish the girls from the guys: their vulgar laugh, swaggering walk, cigarettes."

And their language — not just on construction sites but in offices — "makes even strong men blush," he wrote.

Since the war, women have assumed an ever greater share of the Soviet workload. They now make up about 52 per cent of collective farm workers and 48 per cent of factory workers, according to recent statistics.

Other statistics show that women continue to run Soviet homes and raise children, adding another four to five hours to each workday.

The Soviet press has acknowledged the problems involved in reconciling the dual roles of women, and social planners are trying to ease the burden with playschools for children and take-out meals for quick dinners.

But the attitudes of both men and women toward the woman's role are changing slowly.

"For the woman, the home and the children must always come first, and the job second," said one Moscow mother who works as a doctor.

A man from Tbilisi described the model wife as "an able and hospitable housewife, clever adviser and non-pestering satelite."

Holiday eating: Know when to quit

Think about Thanksgiving, Christmas or New Year's Day and your thoughts are likely to turn to parties and lots of good food and drink. You may have happy memories of last year's groaning board and hopefully you weren't the one who was left groaning.

Over indulgences in holiday drinking, eating and smoking can result in swallowing an excessive amount of air, and according to medical researchers, air swallowing is the chief cause of gastrointestinal gas, bloating and cramps. A tablet called Phazyme, which contains simethicone and digestive enzymes, is recommended by many physicians to relieve symptoms of gaseousness.

However, for a happier holiday this year, good preventive "medicine" is to avoid overindulgences and to take a relaxed approach to partying and holiday preparations. The medical researchers have also found that stress and tension can also be a contributing factor to gastrointestinal gas and its distressing symptoms.

Food writers need spelling lesson

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

A number of years ago we cited some of the misspellings in old cookbooks and declared that today the compilers of such handbooks are better spellers than those of previous generations. We are still of this opinion. However, the misspelling of culinary terms keeps cropping up — in advertisements, magazines, newspapers, booklets, leaflets and menus. Here's a sampling of recent bloopers.

MISSPELLING: Russett, in an advertisement for potatoes.

Just one "t," please, in russet. The adjective denotes reddish brown, reddish gray or yellowish brown color. According to an expert in Cornell's Department of Vegetable Crops, "The types of potatoes generally found on the market in the United States include long russet, long white, round russet, round white and round red tubers. Such classification is arbitrary, since each category includes horticultural varieties which differ greatly in culinary or processing quality, storage life and other important traits."

MISSPELLING: Cauliflowerettes, in a national woman's magazine and a New York newspaper.

Cauliflowerets is enough. Webster defines the word "floweret" as "one of the segments into which a cauliflower is divided."

MISSPELLING: Toureen, in a news letter published by a wine merchant.

Correct spelling: tureen. This deep serving piece for soup was often used in bygone days on handsomely set tables. After going out of style, tureens are back in fashion and in use. Some modern tureens are even electrified. Nowadays tureens are sometimes used for such main dishes as chili, curry or stew. Webster defines a tureen as a "vessel appropriate for soup, sauce or eggs." A miniature tureen is fine for sauce but where did the editors of that great dictionary ever get the idea that a tureen, in any size, is suitable for eggs?

MISSPELLING: Souffle Glace Fraisse, on a Bar Mitzvah menu from a Brooklyn, N.Y., caterer.

Fraise, with one "s," is the correct way to spell the French word for strawberry. Souffle Glace Fraise is an iced strawberry souffle. Such a cold souffle may be made in a souffle dish with a collar tied around it; when the collar is removed, the dessert has the "risen" appearance of a hot souffle.

MISSPELLING: Liquer, in both a New York and a California newspaper.

Liqueur should always have two "u's." Along with "sherbert" instead of "sherbet," it is one of our commonly misspelled words.

MISSPELLING: Citrous, in a leaflet published by a cake-mix manufacturer.

Citrus is spelled without the "o" — as any writer in a country that produces such an abundance of oranges, lemons, limes, grapefruit and other citrus fruit should know.

MISSPELLING: Chicken Meringo, in a booklet from a wine company.

Dallas virtually clinches NFC East crown

Cowboys hold off Big Red

AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals died hard. And Dallas Coach Tom Landry almost died, period.

The Dallas Cowboys finally baked the Cardinals 19-14 in a Thanksgiving Day National Football League game that must have given indigestion to millions of turkey-stuffed fans watching on national television.

It also apparently cooked St. Louis' goose in the National Conference Eastern Division title race. Dallas now is 10-2 and the defending champions are 8-4. Washington is 7-4.

"We've got to go out and win our last two games, take care of our business and hope Dallas can beat Washington," said St. Louis Coach Don Coryell after the heartbreaking loss.

Dallas hosts Washington in the final game of the season.

"I don't know if I could go through another one," sighed Landry. "There is no better football team than St. Louis in that last-minute situation."

The game centered around a big Dallas play in the second quarter and a last-minute St. Louis drive.

Dallas hoodwinked the Cardinals with a fourth down fake punt from its 28 with less than a minute to play in the first half.

Danny White, who is given an option on the play, whipped a short pass to Benny Barnes, who fled 43 yards and set up Roger Staubach's four-yard touchdown run with only 20 seconds to play.

The touchdown broke a 7-7 tie and the Cardinals never caught up.

"The fake punt turned it around for us," said Landry. "They had a maximum blitz on and didn't cover our outside receiver (Barnes). White picked it up and it worked. It's an automatic call ... but we really didn't expect a team like St. Louis to leave him open."

Coryell said, "That (fake punt) was the key. I admire Coach Landry for calling it on fourth down (he didn't). If it hadn't worked, we could have scored at least three points on it. But it did work."

White said, "Benny knows if nobody is blocking on him to turn and look for the pass. If the man covering Benny comes at the punter, nine times out of 10, he'll block it. I just kind of shot-putted the ball to him."

Barnes didn't think the ball ever was going to come down.

"It seems like the ball took forever to get there," said Barnes. "I had time to think about dropping it."

A two-yard touchdown pass from Staubach to Scott Laidlaw and Steve Jones' five-yard scoring run set up the Cowboys' trickery.

St. Louis had trouble with punts from its line of scrimmage in the second half.

Terry Joyce had his punt blocked out of the end zone by Tom Henderson for a safety. Coupled with Efren Herrera's 42-yard field goal, it gave Dallas a 19-7 lead.

Then the "Cardiac Cardinals," who make a specialty of last-second dramatics, made their run.

Quarterback Jim Hart hit Mel Gray with a 19-yard touchdown pass. Then on the next possession, he whipped the Cardinals to the Cowboys 13-yard line with 41 seconds to play and no timeouts left.

Three downs produced only a five-yard completion to Terry Metcalf. Then Hart threw incomplete with eight seconds to play, and the game belonged to Dallas.

Coryell was disturbed by what he thought was interference during the last four-down series. "We had the game taken away from us," he said.

Asked to explain, he said, "I can't amplify on that ... I'm not rich like some coaches are."

Espey and Horrell are 1976's most prolific prep passers

A pair of strong-armed underclassmen--Lance Espey of Dexter and Randy Horrell of Chaffee-- were the top passers in their respective divisions this year, according to final statistics compiled by the Daily Standard for the 1976 high school football season.

Espey, a junior southpaw who became the Bearcats' most prolific passer since Don Backfisch, led the Northern Division of the SeMo Football Conference in passing yardage with 1,147 yards. Espey also led the conference in passes attempted (177), in completions (77) and in touchdown passes (10).

Sikeston's David Shell, who finished second in passing yardage at 781, had the highest completion percentage among quarterbacks who attempted more than 100 passes in the Northern Division. Shell finished the season with a 52 per cent mark, despite suffering a sub-par outing in the playoffs against Ladue. The senior's average of 7.66 yards per attempted pass was best among those who put the ball up 50 times or more.

In the Southern Division, Chaffee's sophomore sensation Randy Horrell nosed out Illmo-Scott City senior Gary Springs by only 13 yards to win the passing title. Horrell threw for 17 touchdowns while leading the Red Devils to the Southern Division crown, completing 50.8 per cent of his aerials. His 66 completions were tops in the league and were good for 848 yards.

Springs had the better completion percentage (54.0) and also was the leader in average yards per attempt (8.35). Springs threw for 835 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Padre GM gives thanks after signing Fingers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I love him!" exclaimed a most happy Buzzie Bavasi moments after his San Diego Padres had signed ace reliever Rollie Fingers.

Bavasi, the club's general manager, was steeped in Thanksgiving dinner and quipped, "I just hope I'm not getting another turkey." He was quick to add he really had no such fears.

Fingers' agent, Jerry Kapstein, reached agreement with Bavasi and Padres owner Ray Kroc Thursday.

Fingers was reported to be having his holiday dinner at his in-laws' home at San Jose, Calif., and could not be reached for comment.

But Kapstein, who was here for the announcment that the California Angels had signed another of his clients, Bobby Grich, spoke for Fingers.

"Rollie was delighted to be joining Gene Tenace with the Padres," he said.

Tenace, a catcher-first baseman, and Fingers were teammates with Oakland and were among eight A's players to become free agents this year.

"With Fingers and Tenace, San Diego now has two of the finest pressure performers in baseball," said Kapstein. "He was very impressed with the Padres' organization and the interest they showed in him. We are delighted with this contract."

Bavasi, who runs the team that tied last season for fourth in the six-club National League West, said talks regarding a contract, terms of which he refused to divulge, started at 4 p.m., PST, and ended two minutes later.

"Kapstein just told us what the boy was looking for and we met it. Many clubs are interested in him, of course. It was a just a matter of money," Bavasi said.

Fingers thus became the 14th free agent to reach terms since the historic Nov. 4 draft, and his choice of the Padres continued the trend of moving from teams with good records to teams with poorer won-lost marks.

He was Kapstein's 10th and final player to be signed in the last 10 days. The others all got multi-year contracts, too, and included pitcher Don Gullett with the New York Yankees, outfielders Joe Rudi and Don Baylor with California, pitcher Wayne Garland with Cleveland, pitcher Doyle Alexander and infielder Bert Campaneris with Texas, and infielder Dave Cash with Montreal.

Kroc, meanwhile, was in Chicago Wednesday to discuss terms with another free agent, outfielder Reggie Jackson.

With the signing of Fingers, however, the Padres completed their two-player limit and now drop out of the Jackson negotiations, leaving the New York Yankees and Montreal Expos as the main bidders for the slugging veteran.

Dallas virtually clinches NFC East crown

Cowboys hold off Big Red

AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals died hard. And Dallas Coach Tom Landry almost died, period.

The Dallas Cowboys finally baked the Cardinals 19-14 in a Thanksgiving Day National Football League game that must have given indigestion to millions of turkey-stuffed fans watching on national television.

It also apparently cooked St. Louis' goose in the National Conference Eastern Division title race. Dallas now is 10-2 and the defending champions are 8-4. Washington is 7-4.

"We've got to go out and win our last two games, take care of our business and hope Dallas can beat Washington," said St. Louis Coach Don Coryell after the heartbreaking loss.

Dallas hosts Washington in the final game of the season.

"I don't know if I could go through another one," sighed Landry. "There is no better football team than St. Louis in that last-minute situation."

The game centered around a big Dallas play in the second quarter and a last-minute St. Louis drive.

Dallas hoodwinked the Cardinals with a fourth down fake punt from its 28 with less than a minute to play in the first half.

Danny White, who is given an option on the play, whipped a short pass to Benny Barnes, who fled 43 yards and set up Roger Staubach's four-yard touchdown run with only 20 seconds to play.

The touchdown broke a 7-7 tie and the Cardinals never caught up.

"The fake punt turned it around for us," said Landry. "They had a maximum blitz on and didn't cover our outside receiver (Barnes). White picked it up and it worked. It's an automatic call ... but we really didn't expect a team like St. Louis to leave him open."

Coryell said, "That (fake punt) was the key. I admire Coach Landry for calling it on fourth down (he didn't). If it hadn't worked, we could have scored at least three points on it. But it did work."

White said, "Benny knows if nobody is blocking on him to turn and look for the pass. If the man covering Benny comes at the punter, nine times out of 10, he'll block it. I just kind of shot-putted the ball to him."

Barnes didn't think the ball ever was going to come down.

"It seems like the ball took forever to get there," said Barnes. "I had time to think about dropping it."

A two-yard touchdown pass from Staubach to Scott Laidlaw and Steve Jones' five-yard scoring run set up the Cowboys' trickery.

St. Louis had trouble with punts from its line of scrimmage in the second half.

Terry Joyce had his punt blocked out of the end zone by Tom Henderson for a safety. Coupled with Efren Herrera's 42-yard field goal, it gave Dallas a 19-7 lead.

Then the "Cardiac Cardinals," who make a specialty of last-second dramatics, made their run.

Quarterback Jim Hart hit Mel Gray with a 19-yard touchdown pass. Then on the next possession, he whipped the Cardinals to the Cowboys 13-yard line with 41 seconds to play and no timeouts left.

Three downs produced only a five-yard completion to Terry Metcalf. Then Hart threw incomplete with eight seconds to play, and the game belonged to Dallas.

Coryell was disturbed by what he thought was interference during the last four-down series. "We had the game taken away from us," he said.

Asked to explain, he said, "I can't amplify on that ... I'm not rich like some coaches are."

Espey and Horrell are 1976's most prolific prep passers

A pair of strong-armed underclassmen--Lance Espey of Dexter and Randy Horrell of Chaffee-- were the top passers in their respective divisions this year, according to final statistics compiled by the Daily Standard for the 1976 high school football season.

Espey, a junior southpaw who became the Bearcats' most prolific passer since Don Backfisch, led the Northern Division of the SeMo Football Conference in passing yardage with 1,147 yards. Espey also led the conference in passes attempted (177), in completions (77) and in touchdown passes (10).

Sikeston's David Shell, who finished second in passing yardage at 781, had the highest completion percentage among quarterbacks who attempted more than 100 passes in the Northern Division. Shell finished the season with a 52 per cent mark, despite suffering a sub-par outing in the playoffs against Ladue. The senior's average of 7.66 yards per attempted pass was best among those who put the ball up 50 times or more.

In the Southern Division, Chaffee's sophomore sensation Randy Horrell nosed out Illmo-Scott City senior Gary Springs by only 13 yards to win the passing title. Horrell threw for 17 touchdowns while leading the Red Devils to the Southern Division crown, completing 50.8 per cent of his aerials. His 66 completions were tops in the league and were good for 848 yards.

Springs had the better completion percentage (54.0) and also was the leader in average yards per attempt (8.35). Springs threw for 835 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Padre GM gives thanks after signing Fingers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I love him!" exclaimed a most happy Buzzie Bavasi moments after his San Diego Padres had signed ace reliever Rollie Fingers.

Bavasi, the club's general manager, was steeped in Thanksgiving dinner and quipped, "I just hope I'm not getting another turkey." He was quick to add he really had no such fears.

Fingers' agent, Jerry Kapstein, reached agreement with Bavasi and Padres owner Ray Kroc Thursday.

Fingers was reported to be having his holiday dinner at his in-laws' home at San Jose, Calif., and could not be reached for comment.

But Kapstein, who was here for the announcment that the California Angels had signed another of his clients, Bobby Grich, spoke for Fingers.

"Rollie was delighted to be joining Gene Tenace with the Padres," he said.

Tenace, a catcher-first baseman, and Fingers were teammates with Oakland and were among eight A's players to become free agents this year.

A & M backs help crush Longhorns

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The greatest speed andpower duo in Texas A&M's history ignored Texas' taunts and a half-century-old jinx in rolling over the Longhorns 27-3 Thursday night.

The "fanaticism" Darrell Royal of Texas sought to prevent his first losing season in more than 20 years of coaching was not enough to stop A&M's George Woodard and Curtis Dickey, who ripped Texas for three touchdowns and 164 yards rushing.

The regionally televised victory was only A&M's second over Texas in Memorial Stadium since it was built in 1924. Woodard, a 257-pound sophomore, punched 109 yards out of the Texas middle in 29 carries and bolted over for touchdowns from the one and two yard lines in the second half.

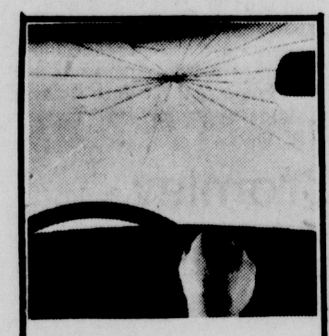

Dickey, a 200-pound freshman with 9.3 sprint relay speed, dashed eight yards to score just before halftime and finished with 55 yards on 14 carries although he sat out much of the second half.

Woodard and Dickey padded their season rushing total to 1,879 yards, which brok eht eold school record of 1,865 set by Bob Smith and Glenn Lippman in 1950.

Woodard finished the regular season with 1,153 yards and Dickey with 726 yards.

"We had a whole lot of mouthing out of Texas tackle Brad Shearer," said Woodard. "I paid no attention to it. He was trying to get me thrown out of the game, trying to get me to fight. I had no intention of fighting."

Texas was penalized 88 yards and lost four fumbles, and A&M safety Lester Hayes stole three Texas passes, keeping the Longhorns out of the end zone in this long rivalry for the first time since 1939.

Duck success if good

Pleasant weather and excellent hunter success have marked the opening of the 1976 Duck Season at Duck Creek. At the half way point of the season 2,430 hunters have taken 4,942 ducks, 80 per cent of which were mallards. Last year only 3,433 ducks were taken the entire season. Duck Season will continue until December 5, 1976 then will re-open December 26, 1976 and close again on January 3. 1977.

Since Duck Creek is in the lower Mississippi Zone (the area between Highway 67 and the Mississippi River), Canada Goose Season will not open until December 7, 1976 and will close January 20, 1977. This late of a starting will coincide more closely with the approximate time when Southeast Missouri is holding its highest number of Geese. The limit on Canada Geese, in this zone, is 2 a day and 4 in possession. There will be 8 goose blinds available at Duck Creek during Goose Season. These blinds will be made available to hunters through a random drawing which will take place wach morning at 5:00 a.m. at Duck Creek Headquarters.

It was originally thought that Fishing and Raccoon Hunting at Duck Creek would re-open for a period in December, but a legal discussion regarding State Management Areas, under State Law, will make that opening impossible. Instead, Duck Creek will re-open for Fishing, Raccoon Hunting, Quail Hunting and Sight-seeing under the frame work of State-wide seasons and on designated parts of Duck Creek, the evening of January 3. SHS cagers look good in squad game; jury still out on girls

Judgement must be reserved on the girls' side of the ledger, but Wednesday night's varsity-jayvee soap game had to be encouraging for the good-sized crowd that showed up for the pre-season exhibition. Sikeston, seeded a surprisingly low third in the upcoming Sikeston Invitational next week, will get things started for 1976-77 Tuesday against New Madrid. The girls start a week later, December 7, against the imposing Kelly Hawks.

The SHS girls looked nervous and unsure in a low-scoring 8-6 game. The team is painfully inexperienced and has only a couple individuals who can shoot. There is, however, some good size and plenty of enthusiasm. Girls' coach Connie Spears has a lot of work to do with her group and the schedule doesn't cooperate in the early going (Kelly is the district's strongest team.) both the attitude of the team members should make things a little easier.

The Bulldog boys, 21-6 a year ago, are just as big and imposing as last year. At center 6-6, 215-pound Paul Gilbow was still trying to think "basketball" and not "football," but he did show an improved shooting touch on the inside during the second half.

Sikeston, for such a huge team, is a good deal quicker this year than last. Anybody who looks at 6-0, 185-pound Larry Jackson or 6-0, 175-pound Jeff Limbaugh and thinks they will take advantage of the Bulldog guards in for a big surprise. Jackson will be as good as any guard in the district, even if his scoring totals won't show it. He and Limbaugh are super-strong on defense, especially. There is also strong benchwork at guard, with Mike Warfield and Morrell Baker to help. Baker, a swingman who played mostly forward against the jayvee, is a 5-11 leaper who led all scorers with 14.

The Bulldogs at forward will feature Alonzo Harris. The 6-4, 200 pound senior is the leading returning scorer with a 13 point average last year. The other side will be manned by 6-2, 180-pound Tim Ward and -or 6-2, 180-pound Kenny Standridge. Ward is a good scorer and Standridge is solid in every phase of the game.

The varsity beat the jayvee 73-33, but a sophomore guard named Redd looked like a future star and hot-shooting sophomore Jeff Young missed the game with a sprained ankle. This may be the strongest SHS junior varsity squad in several years. Only size will hold them back.

Cavs find the right combo

By The Associated Press

Bill Fitch is a basketball coach, but in a way he considers himself a chemist.

He likes mixing and matching his lineup, and Thursday night, he came up with an explosive combination for the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"It was time to search for a little different chemistry," Fitch said after his Cavaliers whipped the Detroit Pistons 111-105 in a National Basketball Association game.

Bingo Smith and Jim Chones, who usually start for Cleveland, both were used in reserve roles and both provided needed relief off the bench. Smith scored 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, triggering a Cleveland rally. Chones, who finished with 18 points, insured the victory with a key three-point play at the end.

Campy Russell started in place of Smith and Nate Thurmond was in the starting lineup ahead of Chones. Austin Carr was another rare starter in the new-look Cleveland lineup and paced the Cavs with 23 points.

In the other NBA games, the Phoenix Suns stopped the Washington Bullets 104-98 and the Houston Rockets whipped the New Orleans Jazz 105-99.

Dick Snyder put Cleveland ahead to stay 102-101 on a 20-foot jump shot with 2:03 remaining, capping a surge in which the Cavaliers erased a five-point deficit at the start of the fourth quarter.

Suns 104, Bullets 98

Ricky Sobers and Paul Westphal combined for 45 second-half points, leading Phoenix over Washington. Washington carried a 51-38 lead into the second half, but the Suns scored 36 third-quarter points, led by Westphal's 15.

The Suns grabbed the lead for the first time in the third period and blitzed past Washington behind their two top scorers. Westphal finished with 26 points and Sobers had 25.

Rockets 105, Jazz 99

Rudy Tomjanovich scored 27 points, leading Houston over New Orleans. The Rockets hit 55 per cent of their field goal attempts for a 57-42 halftime lead. The Jazz later tied it 68-68 as Pete Maravich scored 12 of his 35 points, but strong rebounding by Kevin Kunnert and Tomjanovich's shooting helped the Rockets take control of the game at the end.

SHS cagers look good in squad game; jury still out on girls

Judgement must be reserved on the girls' side of the ledger, but Wednesday night's varsity-jayvee soap game had to be encouraging for the good-sized crowd that showed up for the pre-season exhibition. Sikeston, seeded a surprisingly low third in the upcoming Sikeston Invitational next week, will get things started for 1976-77 Tuesday against New Madrid. The girls start a week later, December 7, against the imposing Kelly Hawks.

The SHS girls looked nervous and unsure in a low-scoring 8-6 game. The team is painfully inexperienced and has only a couple individuals who can shoot. There is, however, some good size and plenty of enthusiasm. Girls' coach Connie Spears has a lot of work to do with her group and the schedule doesn't cooperate in the early going (Kelly is the district's strongest team.) both the attitude of the team members should make things a little easier.

The Bulldog boys, 21-6 a year ago, are just as big and imposing as last year. At center 6-6, 215-pound Paul Gilbow was still trying to think "basketball" and not "football," but he did show an improved shooting touch on the inside during the second half.

Sikeston, for such a huge team, is a good deal quicker this year than last. Anybody who looks at 6-0, 185-pound Larry Jackson or 6-0, 175-pound Jeff Limbaugh and thinks they will take advantage of the Bulldog guards in for a big surprise. Jackson will be as good as any guard in the district, even if his scoring totals won't show it. He and Limbaugh are super-strong on defense, especially. There is also strong benchwork at guard, with Mike Warfield and Morrell Baker to help. Baker, a swingman who played mostly forward against the jayvee, is a 5-11 leaper who led all scorers with 14.

The Bulldogs at forward will feature Alonzo Harris. The 6-4, 200 pound senior is the leading returning scorer with a 13 point average last year. The other side will be manned by 6-2, 180-pound Tim Ward and -or 6-2, 180-pound Kenny Standridge. Ward is a good scorer and Standridge is solid in every phase of the game.

The varsity beat the jayvee 73-33, but a sophomore guard named Redd looked like a future star and hot-shooting sophomore Jeff Young missed the game with a sprained ankle. This may be the strongest SHS junior varsity squad in several years. Only size will hold them back.

Cavs find the right combo

By The Associated Press

Bill Fitch is a basketball coach, but in a way he considers himself a chemist.

He likes mixing and matching his lineup, and Thursday night, he came up with an explosive combination for the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"It was time to search for a little different chemistry," Fitch said after his Cavaliers whipped the Detroit Pistons 111-105 in a National Basketball Association game.

Bingo Smith and Jim Chones, who usually start for Cleveland, both were used in reserve roles and both provided needed relief off the bench. Smith scored 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter, triggering a Cleveland rally. Chones, who finished with 18 points, insured the victory with a key three-point play at the end.

Campy Russell started in place of Smith and Nate Thurmond was in the starting lineup ahead of Chones. Austin Carr was another rare starter in the new-look Cleveland lineup and paced the Cavs with 23 points.

In the other NBA games, the Phoenix Suns stopped the Washington Bullets 104-98 and the Houston Rockets whipped the New Orleans Jazz 105-99.

Dick Snyder put Cleveland ahead to stay 102-101 on a 20-foot jump shot with 2:03 remaining, capping a surge in which the Cavaliers erased a five-point deficit at the start of the fourth quarter.

Suns 104, Bullets 98

Ricky Sobers and Paul Westphal combined for 45 second-half points, leading Phoenix over Washington. Washington carried a 51-38 lead into the second half, but the Suns scored 36 third-quarter points, led by Westphal's 15.

The Suns grabbed the lead for the first time in the third period and blitzed past Washington behind their two top scorers. Westphal finished with 26 points and Sobers had 25.

Rockets 105, Jazz 99

Rudy Tomjanovich scored 27 points, leading Houston over New Orleans. The Rockets hit 55 per cent of their field goal attempts for a 57-42 halftime lead. The Jazz later tied it 68-68 as Pete Maravich scored 12 of his 35 points, but strong rebounding by Kevin Kunnert and Tomjanovich's shooting helped the Rockets take control of the game at the end.

Dr. Lamb

Causes behind the big burp

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My problem is that I burp constantly. Everyone thinks I do it on purpose. In school (I'm 16) my teachers thought I was making fun instead of listening to them. My parents think I do it on purpose just to be rude.

The burps are loud and last long. Even if I close my mouth and cover it up everyone can still hear me. My sister told me not to gulp my food and drinks so I tried that, but it didn't work.

I burp all day no matter where I am. I even burp in church. This is very embarrassing and annoying. I guess I am the burper of the year. Please help me.

DEAR READER — Of course you are not doing it on purpose, but it is probably a nervous habit that you don't understand. Being nervous or anxious among other reasons about burping just makes matters worse.

The burping occurs because you have a lot of air in your stomach. Anyone who has air in the stomach swallows it. Gas can be formed from foods inside the colon but foods are not digested or fermented sufficiently in the stomach to cause any gas there.

When a doctor or parents tell you not to swallow air it is a tough assignment since you are unaware of swallowing air to begin with. How can you stop something you don't know you are doing?

The best trick I have to offer is to hold a firm rubber eraser between your teeth. It is difficult to swallow with your teeth in that position. You will soon become aware of your swallowing habit and then you can do something about it. Try it and see if it helps.

To give you more help I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-8, Controlling Gaseousness. Others who have burping or gas problems can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Ray Cromley

It's a wonder anyone runs

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Some years back I spent a good deal of my spare time trying to persuade outstanding men and women in my community to run for office.

I rarely succeeded, and only after months of effort.

Once talked into running, good men and women were not difficult to get elected, even though my party was a stark minority in the area in which I lived. For members of the other major party found it equally difficult to get inspiring candidates.

The difficulties in these candidate searches lay not just with local positions — city councilman or county board of supervisors — but were equally vexing when it came to selling outstanding people on running for the state legislature and Congress.

Those we approached, of course, were successful in their work, whether in business, writing, teaching, science, farming or government. Those who were young did not want to interrupt their careers. Those who had retired saw little satisfaction in taking the abuse levied on all politicians, the good and bad alike.

Numbers were convinced too, that if elected there was little that could be accomplished. They believed they had little chance of bucking the majority, composed as it was of so few who pursued the public interest. They saw too many lawmakers and administrative officials feathering their nests, being so dependent on special interest groups or so busied with the day-to-day trivia of their jobs that they had no time to give serious study to the important laws on which they voted or to the serious tasks for which they were responsible.

They feared getting caught in the treadmill wherein an official is forced to keep re-election so forcibly in mind that his day-to-day actions become warped. The official becomes engrossed not in what should be done for the best interests of his constituents, but in what must be done to be certain of getting 51 per cent of the votes the next go round.

Each man we approached knew he must be prepared to have all his family skeletons rattled, including those over which he had no control and which, by no stretch of the imagination, would have any influence on the manner in which he carried on his work in office.

He knew he must be prepared to have his name blackened by any foul rumor the opposition or any crackpot should choose to dredge up. If the office were high, he knew his family would have no privacy and the real or imagined faults of wife and children would be spelled out in the gossip columns. We would know who in the family, be it wife, brother, child or sister-in-law, allegedly drank too much, now or in the past, and who made any kind of slip.

Yet when we go to the polls we expect the man or woman we vote for to be a great speaker, a superb debater, personable in looks — that he have a certain mystique, not to mention instant solutions for all our problems.

We demand too that our office holder, whether in the executive or the legislative branch, high or low, be a bountiful dispenser of individual favors to all who ask. We demand not only that he provide more work generally, but that he intervene personally for any job any constituent wants, and for any government promotion any voter believes he deserves. We expect him to step in personally to get the road in front of our house widened — or not widened — and to intervene if we believe the Internal Revenue Service had made a mistake in analyzing our tax liability.

The wonder is that anyone runs for office except born losers.

(FORMERLY RON'S CB RADIO)
THERE WAS NEVER A BETTER TIME TO BUY A 23 CHANNEL CB.
Recently, the Federal Communications Commission announced the addition of 40 channels to the CB band. After January 1, 1977, CB manufacturers may begin selling 40 channel CB sets. It's the best thing that ever happened to owners of present 23 channel sets, and for dealers who sell them. And here are a few facts to convince you that there's never been a better time to buy a 23 channel CB."
1. A 23 channel radio will no more become "obsolete" than TV sets did when UHF channels were added to TV.
2. 23 Channel radios will be able to "talk with" 40 channel radios . . . the first 23 channels are the same on both.
3. 40 Channel radios will not have more power or greater range than the current radios.
4. All the action is, and will continue to be, on existing channels. Channel 19 is still the truckers channel. Channel 9 is still the emergency channel.
5. With a 23 channel CB you can be on the air now . . . with a 40 channel radio you'll have to wait until after January 1, 1977 - and a severe shortage is expected for many months.
6. 40 Channel radios, when they become available, will command full suggested retail prices, probably 15-20% higher than their 23 channel counterparts.
7. You can only use one channel at a time.
8. There are 20 million CB's in operation now . . . 23 channel CB's. They're not going to disappear.
9. The new 40 channel radios will help prevent future overcrowding on the present 23 channels.
10. There are some excellent prices available right not on outstanding 23 channel radios. Once-in-a-lifetime bargains.

Causes behind the big burp

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My problem is that I burp constantly. Everyone thinks I do it on purpose. In school (I'm 16) my teachers thought I was making fun instead of listening to them. My parents think I do it on purpose just to be rude.

The burps are loud and last long. Even if I close my mouth and cover it up everyone can still hear me. My sister told me not to gulp my food and drinks so I tried that, but it didn't work.

I burp all day no matter where I am. I even burp in church. This is very embarrassing and annoying. I guess I am the burper of the year. Please help me.

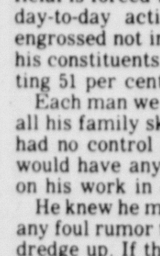

DEAR READER — Of course you are not doing it on purpose, but it is probably a nervous habit that you don't understand. Being nervous or anxious among other reasons about burping just makes matters worse.

The burping occurs because you have a lot of air in your stomach. Anyone who has air in the stomach swallows it. Gas can be formed from foods inside the colon but foods are not digested or fermented sufficiently in the stomach to cause any gas there.

When a doctor or parents tell you not to swallow air it is a tough assignment since you are unaware of swallowing air to begin with. How can you stop something you don't know you are doing?

The best trick I have to offer is to hold a firm rubber eraser between your teeth. It is difficult to swallow with your teeth in that position. You will soon become aware of your swallowing habit and then you can do something about it. Try it and see if it helps.

To give you more help I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-8, Controlling Gaseousness. Others who have burping or gas problems can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Ray Cromley

It's a wonder anyone runs

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Some years back I spent a good deal of my spare time trying to persuade outstanding men and women in my community to run for office.

I rarely succeeded, and only after months of effort.

Once talked into running, good men and women were not difficult to get elected, even though my party was a stark minority in the area in which I lived. For members of the other major party found it equally difficult to get inspiring candidates.

The difficulties in these candidate searches lay not just with local positions — city councilman or county board of supervisors — but were equally vexing when it came to selling outstanding people on running for the state legislature and Congress.

Those we approached, of course, were successful in their work, whether in business, writing, teaching, science, farming or government. Those who were young did not want to interrupt their careers. Those who had retired saw little satisfaction in taking the abuse levied on all politicians, the good and bad alike.

Numbers were convinced too, that if elected there was little that could be accomplished. They believed they had little chance of bucking the majority, composed as it was of so few who pursued the public interest. They saw too many lawmakers and administrative officials feathering their nests, being so dependent on special interest groups or so busied with the day-to-day trivia of their jobs that they had no time to give serious study to the important laws on which they voted or to the serious tasks for which they were responsible.

They feared getting caught in the treadmill wherein an official is forced to keep re-election so forcibly in mind that his day-to-day actions become warped. The official becomes engrossed not in what should be done for the best interests of his constituents, but in what must be done to be certain of getting 51 per cent of the votes the next go round.

Each man we approached knew he must be prepared to have all his family skeletons rattled, including those over which he had no control and which, by no stretch of the imagination, would have any influence on the manner in which he carried on his work in office.

He knew he must be prepared to have his name blackened by any foul rumor the opposition or any crackpot should choose to dredge up. If the office were high, he knew his family would have no privacy and the real or imagined faults of wife and children would be spelled out in the gossip columns. We would know who in the family, be it wife, brother, child or sister-in-law, allegedly drank too much, now or in the past, and who made any kind of slip.

Yet when we go to the polls we expect the man or woman we vote for to be a great speaker, a superb debater, personable in looks — that he have a certain mystique, not to mention instant solutions for all our problems.

We demand too that our office holder, whether in the executive or the legislative branch, high or low, be a bountiful dispenser of individual favors to all who ask. We demand not only that he provide more work generally, but that he intervene personally for any job any constituent wants, and for any government promotion any voter believes he deserves. We expect him to step in personally to get the road in front of our house widened — or not widened — and to intervene if we believe the Internal Revenue Service had made a mistake in analyzing our tax liability.

The wonder is that anyone runs for office except born losers.

THERE WAS NEVER A BETTER TIME TO BUY A 23 CHANNEL CB.
Recently the Federal Communications Commission announced the addition of 23 channels to the CB band. After January 1, 1977, CB manufacturers may begin selling 23 channel CB sets. It's the best thing that ever happened to owners of present 23 channel sets, and for dealers who sell them. And here are a few facts to convince you that there's never been a better time to buy a 23 channel CB.
1. A 23 channel radio will no more become "obsolete" than TV sets did when UHF channels were added to TV.
2. 23 Channel radios will be able to "talk with" 40 channel radios . . . the first 23 channels are the same on both.
3. 40 Channel radios will not have more power or greater range than the current radios.
4. All the action is, and will continue to be, on existing channels. Channel 19 is still the truckers channel. Channel 9 is still the emergency channel.
5. With a 23 channel CB you can be on the air now . . . with a 40 channel radio you'll have to wait until after January 1, 1977 - and a severe shortage is expected for many months.
6. 40 Channel radios, when they become available, will command full suggested retail prices, probably 15-20% higher than their 23 channel counterparts.
7. You can only use one channel at a time.
8. There are 20 million CB's in operation now . . . 23 channel CB's. They're not going to disappear.
9. The new 40 channel radios will help prevent future overcrowding on the present 23 channels.
10. There are some excellent prices available right not on outstanding 23 channel radios. Once-in-a-lifetime bargains.

Hope will entertain at ASU Nov. 30

JONESBORO, Ark. — The "King of Comedy" is coming to Arkansas State University Tuesday, Nov. 30. Bob Hope will appear in concerrt at 8 p.m. in ASU's Indian Field House.

Hope, the man with more than 270 television specials and more than 1,000 radio performances, will entertain Mid-South residents the way he has millions of listeners for over 49 years.

"News" magazine proclaimed Hope as "a legend in his own time" and "a national monument in the United States." He's been hailed by critics and fans as "Mr. Entertainment," "Mr. Humanitarian," and "Uncle Sam Without Whiskers."

When President John F. Kennedy presented Hope with the nation's highest award, the Congressional Medal of Honor, he called him "America's most prized ambassador of goodwill throughout the world."

Hope's life history is long and eventful and not all comedy. He was born in Eltham, England, on May 29, 1903. During his childhood, he was reared and educated in Cleveland, Ohio.

Hope has been noted as a comedian, but things weren't always comedy oriented. His early attempts in business included dance instructor, clerk, amateur boxer and newspaper reporter.

He was initiated into the Entertainment Hall of Fame in 1975. He has received more than 1,000 awards and citations for humanitarian and professional efforts.

He has been the recipient of such honors as the first honorary member of Harvard's Hasty Pudding Theatricals, the Murray- Green AFL-CIO Award, the Tom Dooley Award and the Pacem in Terris Award.

Hope has traveled more than seven million air miles in his lifetime. He began entertaining GI's May 6, 1941, at March Field, Calif., and dedicated a large part of his career to that area of entertainment.

His famous Christmas shows began in 1948 with a request from the State Department to entertain Berlin airlift forces. Since then, the shows have become a tradition, circling the world with tours.

Hope said he considered the 1972 USO Christmas Tour his "last overseas show." However, he continues to entertain servicemen and women across America each year with a small troupe.

Hope has never visited an Arkansas college or university, but he does average about 10 college shows a year.

Only 2,000 reserved seats remain available at $5 each. they are presently on sale at all of Jonesboro's main and branch banks and at First National Bank of Blytheville, First National Bank of Newport and Security Bank of Paragould. They may also be ordered from the Union Program Office, Box EE, State University, Ark. 72467. All mail orders should include a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Niswonger is appointed administrator for Southeast Missouri Hospital

CAPE GIRARDEAU — James R. Stricker, administrator of Southeast Missouri Hospital for almost 10 years, submitted his resignation to the board of trustees at their bimonthly meeting.

The board followed Stricker's announcement with the appointment of O. D. Niswonger as his successor. Niswonger has been associate administrator in recent years and has been on the hospital administrative staff since Jan. 1, 1961.

Stricker earlier had announced his plans to resign to the executive committee of the board after having announced to that group in May that he felt the time had come for him to advance himself in an applied field.

He said in a statement read to trustees that he had been seeking a career change for several months. "I need to devote my full time and effort to my goal of finding a position in the health care consulting field.

"I wish to use the knowledge and skills that I have gained in my 26 years of hospital work and I feel that in consulting I can share these abilities to a greater degree than I could as administrator of any single hospital."

The board, in an announcement to employes expressed its appreciation "for the strides the hospital has taken under Stricker's leadership; the huge building program undertaken through his direction; the establishment of modern and sound financial practices, and his contributions to the health care and the general well being of this community."

The hospital is now engaged in the final phases of an $8 million construction program which will make the health care institution one of the most modern in Missouri. Currently under way is complete renovation of the original hospital, which will be removed from acute care use to ancillary facilities.

John L. Blue, president of the board, cited the unselfish devotion to the development of patient care under Stricker and his development of the facilities from a small local hospital to one that has more than 250 beds and serves a wide area of two states.

NEW DUTIES

Niswonger is a veteran in the health care field, and through his long tenure as associate administrator, is uniquely qualified to succeed Stricker, the board president said.

He served for two years in the U.S. Navy Hospital Corps during World War II as a pharmacist mate, and holds a commission in the inactive reserve of the U.S. Public Health Service with rank equivalent to that of lieutenant commander in the Navy.

He holds his bachelor of science degree from Southeast Missouri State University with a major in biology and minor in chemistry. His master of arts degree is in public health from the University of North Carolina. In addition he has at attended numerous institutes and seminars.

Niswonger served for eight years on state and local levels as a sanitarian involved in environmental health, was for four years regional consultant with the Missouri Heart Association.

He holds membership in the Missouri Public Health Association, the American Public Health Association and has been chairman of various conferences and organizations in the health field.

Niswonger is nationally known as an iris grower and hybridizer and has spoken frequently to national and regional iris organizations. He is a member of the Cape Girardeau Rotary Club.

As a layman in the Methodist Church, he has served as chairman of the board at Grace Methodist Church, charge lay leader, associate district lay leader, president of the Methodist Men and Sunday School teacher.

Niswonger has urged adoption of a County Health Unit, served as president of the county Public Health Advisory Council and president of the Cape County Heart Council.

Mrs. Niswonger is the former Miss Marie Edna Deneke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Deneke of Gordonville. They have three children, all born on the same date, Feb. 25, 1951, 1953 and 1957.

Niswonger is appointed administrator for Southeast Missouri Hospital

CAPE GIRARDEAU — James R. Stricker, administrator of Southeast Missouri Hospital for almost 10 years, submitted his resignation to the board of trustees at their bimonthly meeting.

The board followed Stricker's announcement with the appointment of O. D. Niswonger as his successor. Niswonger has been associate administrator in recent years and has been on the hospital administrative staff since Jan. 1, 1961.

Stricker earlier had announced his plans to resign to the executive committee of the board after having announced to that group in May that he felt the time had come for him to advance himself in an applied field.

He said in a statement read to trustees that he had been seeking a career change for several months. "I need to devote my full time and effort to my goal of finding a position in the health care consulting field.

"I wish to use the knowledge and skills that I have gained in my 26 years of hospital work and I feel that in consulting I can share these abilities to a greater degree than I could as administrator of any single hospital."

The board, in an announcement to employes expressed its appreciation "for the strides the hospital has taken under Stricker's leadership; the huge building program undertaken through his direction; the establishment of modern and sound financial practices, and his contributions to the health care and the general well being of this community."

The hospital is now engaged in the final phases of an $8 million construction program which will make the health care institution one of the most modern in Missouri. Currently under way is complete renovation of the original hospital, which will be removed from acute care use to ancillary facilities.

John L. Blue, president of the board, cited the unselfish devotion to the development of patient care under Stricker and his development of the facilities from a small local hospital to one that has more than 250 beds and serves a wide area of two states.

NEW DUTIES

Niswonger is a veteran in the health care field, and through his long tenure as associate administrator, is uniquely qualified to succeed Stricker, the board president said.

He served for two years in the U.S. Navy Hospital Corps during World War II as a pharmacist mate, and holds a commission in the inactive reserve of the U.S. Public Health Service with rank equivalent to that of lieutenant commander in the Navy.

He holds his bachelor of science degree from Southeast Missouri State University with a major in biology and minor in chemistry. His master of arts degree is in public health from the University of North Carolina. In addition he has at attended numerous institutes and seminars.

Niswonger served for eight years on state and local levels as a sanitarian involved in environmental health, was for four years regional consultant with the Missouri Heart Association.

He holds membership in the Missouri Public Health Association, the American Public Health Association and has been chairman of various conferences and organizations in the health field.

Niswonger is nationally known as an iris grower and hybridizer and has spoken frequently to national and regional iris organizations. He is a member of the Cape Girardeau Rotary Club.

As a layman in the Methodist Church, he has served as chairman of the board at Grace Methodist Church, charge lay leader, associate district lay leader, president of the Methodist Men and Sunday School teacher.

Niswonger has urged adoption of a County Health Unit, served as president of the county Public Health Advisory Council and president of the Cape County Heart Council.

Mrs. Niswonger is the former Miss Marie Edna Deneke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Deneke of Gordonville. They have three children, all born on the same date, Feb. 25, 1951, 1953 and 1957.

Major motion picture is being filmed

Fair Winds Productions, a new independent film- making corporation headquartered in Little Rock, Ark., began shooting Oct. 21 on its first major picture, "Wishbone Cutter", a post- Civil War action- adventure tale with supernatural overtones.

The plot centers around the title character of Cutter, played by Joe Don Baker, and his half-breed Cherokee- Irish friend, played by Joy Houck Jr., and their search along the Buffalo River in northern Arkansas for a bag of diamonds that have been stashed in a cave by Slim Pickens (Vergil) before he went off to war.

Cutter recruits a young geologist (Ted Neeley) to accompany him on the search. Shortly after they set out, the trio encounter a young woman (Sondra Locke), the only member of a party of settlers left alive after an attack by assailants using arrows with mysterious markings.

Their journey upriver is beset by strange and eerie happenings as they are pursued by an unseen and unknown enemy. It's a story that demands you see the picture from the beginning for its full impact.

Joe Don Baker received international acclaim for his performance as Buford Pusser in the film "Walking Tall". Ted Neeley's performance in the title role of "Jesus Christ, Superstar" gave him worldwide recognition as a gifted and talented actor. Sondra Locke, seen most recently in "The Outlaw Josey Wales", was a nominee for an Academy Award for her performance in "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter".

The company of "Wishbone Cutter" has been on location at Bull Shoals, Ark., with most of the shooting being done on the Buffalo River during the high period of the changing autumn foliage. The incredible beauty of the fall season in the Ozarks is an integral part of the film's background.

It is anticipated that the top hit song "The Night They Drove Ole Dixie Down" by Robbie Robertson (of The Band) will be a part of the musical score. Plans also include a tavern scene with a performance by the Ozark Mountain Daredevils.

Producing and directing "Wishbone Cutter" is Earl E. Smith, who also authored the screenplay. Former films authored by Smith include "The Legend of Boggy Creek", "Bootleggers", "The Winds of Autumn", "Winterhawk" and "The Town That Dreaded Sundown".

Co-producer of the film is Barbara Pryor, wife of Governor David Pryor of Arkansas. Mrs. Pryor became interested in film-making while working as a script supervisor on a film last year in her home state. From that interest came her decision to team up with Smith and form their own production company, Fair Winds. Vice president of the corporation is Steve Lyons, formerly with Charles B. Pierce Productions.

On location with the company in Arkansas is also Nolan Patterson of California, noted artist and photographer. Patterson is in charge of still photography for the film.

Distribution for "Wishbone Cutter" will be handled by HOWCO, International, based in Louisiana, and headed by veteran film-maker- exhibitor-distributor Joy N. Houck Sr.

The projected date for release of the film is Easter, 1977.

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

"We will die," Manoah cried out to his wife, "for we have seen God!" But his wife said, "If the Lord were going to kill us he wouldn't have accepted our burnt offerings and wouldn't have appeared to us and told us this wonderful thing and done these miracles." When her son was born they named him Samson, and the Lord blessed him as he grew up. And the Spirit of the Lord began to excite him whenever he visited the parade grounds of the army of the tribe of Dan.

Sondra Locke, seen most recently in "The Outlaw Josey Wales", was a nominee for an Academy Award for her performance in "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter".

The company of "Wishbone Cutter" has been on location at Bull Shoals, Ark., with most of the shooting being done on the Buffalo River during the high period of the changing autumn foliage. The incredible beauty of the fall season in the Ozarks is an integral part of the film's background.

It is anticipated that the top hit song "The Night They Drove Ole Dixie Down" by Robbie Robertson (of The Band) will be a part of the musical score. Plans also include a tavern scene with a performance by the Ozark Mountain Daredevils.

Producing and directing "Wishbone Cutter" is Earl E. Smith, who also authored the screenplay. Former films authored by Smith include "The Legend of Boggy Creek", "Bootleggers", "The Winds of Autumn", "Winterhawk" and "The Town That Dreaded Sundown".

Co-producer of the film is Barbara Pryor, wife of Governor David Pryor of Arkansas. Mrs. Pryor became interested in film-making while working as a script supervisor on a film last year in her home state. From that interest came her decision to team up with Smith and form their own production company, Fair Winds. Vice president of the corporation is Steve Lyons, formerly with Charles B. Pierce Productions.

On location with the company in Arkansas is also Nolan Patterson of California, noted artist and photographer. Patterson is in charge of still photography for the film.

Distribution for "Wishbone Cutter" will be handled by HOWCO, International, based in Louisiana, and headed by veteran film-maker- exhibitor-distributor Joy N. Houck Sr.

The projected date for release of the film is Easter, 1977.

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

"We will die," Manoah cried out to his wife, "for we have seen God!" But his wife said, "If the Lord were going to kill us he wouldn't have accepted our burnt offerings and wouldn't have appeared to us and told us this wonderful thing and done these miracles." When her son was born they named him Samson, and the Lord blessed him as he grew up. And the Spirit of the Lord began to excite him whenever he visited the parade grounds of the army of the tribe of Dan.

AMC Car Test Driving A Family Affair

Test driving is a family affair at American Motors' test facility at Michigan International Speedway. The Mannor family circle at test Pacer to discuss the clan's driving activities. Dawn listens from the driver's seat as her husband and weekend foreman Jim give advice. Mike Mannor, Jim's brother (center) is a test driver, too. Ray Mannor (left) a security guard at the test track, likes to talk testing with sons Jim and Mike.

Does test driving next year's cars on the steep-banked curves of an international speedway sound like adventure and high romance?

At the American Motors Corporation test facility in Michigan's rolling Irish Hills, there is little of the Evel Knievel-brand of romance for test drivers. But now and again romance of another sort does start up.

Jim Mannor and Dawn Bloom met at the Michigan International Speedway here while test-driving American Motors cars. The setting of a two-mile oval track, where NASCAR and USAC drivers top 200 miles an hour, proved romantic to them. They literally went around together for three years — in separate AMC cars — and last April were married.

Romance however, is not scheduled into the program that Jim, Dawn and the other drivers are hired to conduct. American Motors' schedule at the company's two main test centers, the Burlington proving ground in Wisconsin and the leased MIS, is designed to develop exacting data on emission controls, fuel economy, durability, vehicle performance, safety and noise. Some three million miles of driving are accumulated at the tracks each year.

"We do precision driving," Jim Mannor says. "There's nothing particularly romantic about it."

Most of the testing at the speedway is done for emissions certification. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and California require that a selection of each manufacturer's prototype be tested over a 50,000-mile, highly-prescribed course, well before the cars can be built or sold. Additional 4,000-mile runs are part of these same Federal and California requirements.

To add up as much mileage in a few weeks as a normal car owner puts on a vehicle in four or five years of driving, American Motors carries on certification testing on a 24-hour schedule, seven days a week.

The cars run continuously. After 80 minutes at the wheel, the driver gets a ten-minute rest. A relief driver keeps the car in motion during the breaks and lunch hours.

"People are surprised when I say I do test driving," Dawn says. "They often ask if I drive at 180 miles an hour. I tell them my average speed for exhaust emissions certification driving is only about 31 miles an hour."

The emissions test cycle is designed to simulate real-world driving patterns. Drivers must slow down, stop, accelerate and slow down again every quarter of a mile or so.

Every movement the driver makes is watched, not from the pits, but from the instrument panel. A special device called a tachograph registers the car's speed and stopping time on a paper disc. The record of each eight-hour drive is kept so that both the federal government and the company engineers can verify that the tests adhered to the emissions cycle exactly.

"It's not as difficult as it seems," says Gay Williams, a three-year test driving veteran. "You just watch the accelerometer gauge."

This gauge is mounted on the windshield of each test vehicle. The driver matches throttle and brake pedal pressures to the instrument's indicator, and learns how to smooth out driving techniques to stick to the cycle.

Experienced test drivers ride with recruits for as many eight-hour shifts as are necessary to teach the subtle techniques involved. Gay Williams is breaking in a recruit this week, her younger sister Terry.

Gay, a 24-year-old physical education teacher, paid her way through school test driving for American Motors. Terry, an 18-year-old college freshman, hopes to follow in her big sister's tread marks.

"Most of our drivers are women," says Dennis Hahnke, AM's road test engineering supervisor. "Some are students, some homemakers, some even farmers. We try to keep our schedules flexible to meet both our needs and theirs."

The company's test needs are as varied as the needs of its drivers. Consequently, there are anywhere from 30 to 150 test drivers employed, depending on the test load and the time each driver wants to put in. Everything at the track — schedules, people, and cars — is moved around frequently.

It must work. Most of the drivers recommend the job to relatives a short time after starting. There are more than a dozen family groupings — sisters, husbands and wives, fathers and sons — now working at the AM track here.

Jim Mannor, for example, is a teacher and coach who signed on to test drive three years ago. That's when he met Dawn, a student at Central Michigan University and fellow test driver, and made it a husband-and-wife team. Jim now has his brother Mike test driving and his father Ray working as an AM security guard at the track gate on weekends.

"It's a job with some unusual aspects," Jim says. "Like after making left-hand turns around the oval all night, it's a strange sensation to get into your own car and make a right-hand turn."

"Like all jobs," Dawn adds, "the novelty of the glamorous title and surroundings wears off. The tachograph becomes a time clock and keeps you following the routine correctly. It's routine. Not really a bad routine, and definitely a necessary one."

This gauge is mounted on the windshield of each test vehicle. The driver matches throttle and brake pedal pressures to the instrument's indicator, and learns how to smooth out driving techniques to stick to the cycle.

Experienced test drivers ride with recruits for as many eight-hour shifts as are necessary to teach the subtle techniques involved. Gay Williams is breaking in a recruit this week, her younger sister Terry.

Gay, a 24-year-old physical education teacher, paid her way through school test driving for American Motors. Terry, an 18-year-old college freshman, hopes to follow in her big sister's tread marks.

"Most of our drivers are women," says Dennis Hahnke, AM's road test engineering supervisor. "Some are students, some homemakers, some even farmers. We try to keep our schedules flexible to meet both our needs and theirs."

The company's test needs are as varied as the needs of its drivers. Consequently, there are anywhere from 30 to 150 test drivers employed, depending on the test load and the time each driver wants to put in. Everything at the track — schedules, people, and cars — is moved around frequently.

It must work. Most of the drivers recommend the job to relatives a short time after starting. There are more than a dozen family groupings — sisters, husbands and wives, fathers and sons — now working at the AM track here.

Jim Mannor, for example, is a teacher and coach who signed on to test drive three years ago. That's when he met Dawn, a student at Central Michigan University and fellow test driver, and made it a husband-and-wife team. Jim now has his brother Mike test driving and his father Ray working as an AM security guard at the track gate on weekends.

"It's a job with some unusual aspects," Jim says. "Like after making left-hand turns around the oval all night, it's a strange sensation to get into your own car and make a right-hand turn."

"Like all jobs," Dawn adds, "the novelty of the glamorous title and surroundings wears off. The tachograph becomes a time clock and keeps you following the routine correctly. It's routine. Not really a bad routine, and definitely a necessary one."

DEXTER — Irs. Fuad Kandalaft of Dexter left for Aman, Jordan Tuesday to help bring her husband and 10-year-old daughter, Leila back to the United States, according to Dr. H. A. Poe an associate of Dr. Kandalaft.

Dr. Kandalaft was wounded at the Intercontinental Hotel in Aman, Jordan last week when it was raided by terorists. Dr. Kandalaft, alon with his daughter Leila, were visiting relatives in Jorda. Leila was not injured in the attack.

Dr. Poe reported that Dr. Kandalaft had some use of his leg but there is no feeling in his foot. He noted that it would probably be several days before Dr. Kandalaft, his wife, and his daughter returned to the United States.

An official from 10th District Congressman Bill Burlison's Office said that Dr. Kandalaft had received a wound in the leg from a grenade and shrapnel wound and from flying glass. Burlison's office said they had assisted Mrs. Kandalaft to determine the condition of her husband and daughter. Leila was safe and staying with relatives, it was noted.

Reports indicated that Dr. Kandalaft will go to a St. Louis hospital after he returns to the United States for further treatment.

The Kandalaft's two high school daughters Patty and Cathy are being helped by neighbors while their parents are gone. Vicki, a student at the University of Missouri- Kansas City is expected to be home for Thanksgiving.

Names in the News

LONDON (AP) — Former Beatle John Lennon has criticized his ex-wife Cynthia for saying their marriage began to collapse after he took his first trip on LSD, according to a London newspaper.

A letter bearing Lennon's name and printed in today's Daily Express said the marriage was "long over before the advent of LSD or Yoko Ono," the Japanese artist who became Lennon's second wife. The Express said the letter was delivered to the offices of some British newspapers in New York, where the Lennons live.

Cynthia, who was recently quoted in a magazine interview, has remarried and now lives in Wales.

LONDON (AP) — Former British Prime Minister Harold Wilson may give up his House of Commons seat and take an appointment at a university in Israel, the Daily Mail newspaper reported today.

Columnist Nigel Dempster said Wilson would welcome the chance to spend six months a year lecturing on government and world affairs at somewhere like the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. He has had enough of being a lawmaker after 31 years in the House, the report said.

There was no immediate comment on the report from Wilson, who resigned the premiership and leadership of the governing Labor party last March.

The patrol said a car driven south by Nancy Kee, 46, of Chicago Ill. was traveling at a high rate of speed and struck another car, driven south by Norman Weiss, 24, of LaPorte, Ind., in the rear. The Weiss car ran off the road and overturned. The Kee car continued on 1,191 feet before coming to a stop.

Injured in the accident were two passengers in the Kee vehicle, Mary Hill, 21, of Chicago, minor injuries, and Eugenia Spires, 77, also of Chicago, moderate injuries. The injured were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

A one-car accident at 8:50 a.m. today on Route 67, three miles north of Neelyville, resulted in moderate injuries to the driver of the northbound car, Cresa House, 54, of Corning, Ark.

The accident occurred when the car ran off the road onto the right shoulder and the driver tried to pull back onto the pavement, lost control of the car, ran off the left side of the road through a fence and then struck a barn.

She was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

PLAINS, GA. (AP) — With out-of-state tourists crowding into Jimmy Carter's hometown, Georgia officials are looking for "tasteful" ways to lure the visitors to the Peach State's other attractions. The state also may build a visitors center on the edge of town and bring people in by bus or tram in order to unravel traffic jams and preserve parking space for Plains' 683 permanent residents.

DANVILLE, Vt. (AP) — Survivors of the great flu epidemic half a century ago don't have to be persuaded to get swine flu shots. They remember with the precision of childhood the deadly ravages of the disease. Memories of the epidemic which killed more than 2,000 Vermonters have spurred many elderly persons to get shots, said David Scott, director of the state's immunization program. Twenty million persons worldwide, including 548,000 Americans, died in the 1918-19 pandemic, believed caused by swine flu or a similar strain.

Southeast Missourian sold to Thompson chain

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Purchase of The Southeast Missourian by Thomson Newspapers, Inc., was announced Wednesday by Harry Naeter, the newspaper's publisher.

Hugh Hollister, general manager of The Missourian, will be named publisher.

St. Clair McCabe, executive vice president of the Thomson group, emphasized there will be no changes in either the policies or the personnel of The Missourian.

The Thomson organization, which owns newspapers across the United States, including the recent purchase of the Carthage Press in southwest Missouri, is headquartered in Des Plaines, Ill.

K. R. Thomson, president of the newspaper group, said "We make it a point of not interfering with local editorial policies. It is my belief that a newspaper publisher should observe two basic principles: That the newspaper serve the best interests of the community, and in doing so, tell the truth."

The Missourian has operated as a family- owned enterprise since 1904, when Fred and George Naeter, brothers who were printers in St. Louis, came here and purchased a weekly newspaper with a $425 down payment.

George Naeter died in 1956 and Fred Naeter in 1965. The business has been conducted since that time by Harry Naeter, son of the third brother, who joined the paper soon after its purchase. The elder Harry Naeter died as a young man in 1918 shortly after the son's birth.

Naeter said the decision to sell The Missourian after 74 years was difficult.

The Missourian was founded almost by accident. George and Fred Naeter, printers in St. Louis after newspaper work in their home town of Shelbina and elsewhere, caught a boat to Cape Girardeau on a weekend excursion in 1904.

They walked over the city and up to the Normal School Campus where they met the late B. F. Johnson, mathematics professor. Learning they were newspapermen, he persuaded them that they should acquire a defunct paper here.

They were able, through the help of the late M. E. Leming and others, to raise $425 capital as down payment and purchased the Cape Girardeau Republican, housed in the Old Opera House building. There were three other papers here then, but they soon expired. Harry Naeter joined the brothers soon after the newspaper was established on Oct. 3, 1904.

The Missourian has been housed in a number of places — the Wilson Building at Broadway and Spanish, then in its own building whichlater became the Chamber of Commerce structure which was razed a couple of years ago. they stayed there until 1925 when the present Missourian Building was erected.

Friday's over view in the news

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Otis, an 18-inch octopus who lives in a sea water aquarium at the Seafarer restaurant, had its name changed to Iris after it laid about 5,000 eggs.

Restaurant owner Clarence Cash said he has already lined up four foster homes in anticipation of the mass hatching and is looking for 4,996 more.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Frank and Cathy Hasenauer's travel agency caters to jet-set pets, offering everything from airline tickets to health papers for animals whose owners let them travel.

"We arrange their traveling, planning, boarding, health papers, pickup and delivery," says Hasenauer, who operates out of an abandoned military base near the Los Angeles International Airport. "We just don't have any liveried drivers, that's all, no limos."

He said the agency has boarding facilities, but "no frills, just comfort. Nothing extra, like padded cells, or padded runs. No piped-in music."

Hasenauer said he and his wife have helped owners import and export "race horses, hippopotami, cattle, swine, birds and just about any kind of animal you can name." Their clients include about 200 dogs and cats a month, most of them accompanying their masters in a move or long journey, he said.

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Barry Rosen says his mother "doesn't exactly approve" of her son from the Bronx wrestling steers on the rodeo circuit.

"She thinks her Jewish son should be a school teacher. She thinks I'm crazy, that somewhere along the line she must have dropped me on my head," said Rosen, 27, who claims to have a master's degree from New York's Juilliard School of Music.

"It's kind of strange being a Jewish cowboy from the Bronx," he said.

From the time he was 6 his sole ambition was to be the "best darn trumpet player in the world," Rosen said, but instead he drifted into the world of rodeos after participating in an amateur event and now says he's "addicted."

Thanksgiving Roundup for 1976

By The Associated Press

At the first Thanksgiving 355 years ago, the Pilgrims gave thanks for their first harvest after surviving the New England winter.

On Thursday, as 100 modern Pilgrims re-enacted the ceremony in a Miami church, the Rev. Harold Davenport gave a different kind of thanks to his costumed congregation:

"I want to thank you all," he told the group, many of them wearing big white collars and black knee britches. "It takes a lot of courage to dress up like this in these outfits."

Another Thanksgiving commemoration wasn't so lighthearted. In Plymouth, Mass., while townsfolk and tourists feasted on 800 pounds of turkey, some 150 descendants of New England Indian tribes gathered to mourn the changes of the past three centuries.

"Yesterday we walked our forests free of boundaries," said Wamsutta, a descendant of the Wampanoag tribe also known as Frank Jones. "Today we walk your macadam roads and live in your concrete houses. But our spirit refuses to die."

But the Abnaki Indians of Vermont and the Creeks of Alabama had cause for celebration.

Gov. Thomas Salmon signed an executive order giving the Abnakis tribal status, "one of the greatest Thanksgiving gifts that could have been given to the Indians of Vermont," said Chief Walter Watso. It means the 1,700 Abnakis may work toward legislation to regain the land and hunting and fishing rights they seek.

In Poarch, Ala., local Creeks put on their 6th annual Creek Indian Pow Wow. About 1,000 persons, perhaps half of them with full or part Indian blood, attended.

"For many, it's a starting point," said Bill Smith, a construction worker who teaches native dances. "We're trying to bring back the sense of heritage that was lost."

Other Americans, including President Ford and President-elect Jimmy Carter, enjoyed traditional Thanksgiving dinners. Many who had no families dined well — and often free — on hundreds of turkeys prepared in restaurants and shelters for the poor and elderly.

Ford slept late, watched televised football games, swam in the heated outdoor pool at Camp David, Md., and ate a turkey dinner with 15 relatives and family friends. Earlier, he telephoned members of his high school football team, holding their annual reunion in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Rosalynn Carter cooked a turkey with cornbread stuffing for 11 members of the Carter clan. Carter made no public appearance.

Chicago restaurateur Ismet Deletioglu, a Turkish immigrant who said he wanted to share his success with the "elderly, poor, hungry or homeless," served free turkey dinners.

Flu epidemic survivors remember...

DANVILLE, Vt. (AP) — Survivors of the great flu epidemic half a century ago don't have to be persuaded to get swine flu shots. They remember with the precision of childhood the deadly ravages of the disease.

"We could see horse-drawn hearses go by the house every few minutes," said Florence Beck, 67, as she waited in line to get her shot at a state Health Department clinic here.

"Our football season was canceled, and the team captain died," said her husband, Theodore, who played high school football at St. Johnsbury Academy when the epidemic struck the northeastern Vermont school in the winter of 1918-1919. "They canceled nearly all activities in the town."

Mrs. Beck, who now lives in West Danville, was 9 when the epidemic struck. She said she had a mild case of the flu, and she recalled that classes were canceled at the Samuel Slater School in her hometown of Pawtucket, R.I., so the building could be converted to a makeshift hospital to treat victims of the outbreak.

Memories of the epidemic which killed more than 2,000 Vermonters have spurred many elderly persons to get shots, said David Scott, director of the state's immunization program. Twenty million persons worldwide, including 548,000 Americans, died in the pandemic, believed caused by swine flu or a similar strain.

Most elderly Danville residents had shown up at the clinic for vaccinations even before reports on Monday of an apparent case of swine flu in Missouri. Health officials found no other such cases. But authorities in several states said the report caused an upsurge in public concern over swine flu, while other official in other states attributed an increase in their inoculation rates to the Missouri report.

With less than two weeks left in the state's free vaccination program, Scott said more than 60 per cent of Vermont's senior citizens — considered "high risk" cases in a flu outbreak — have been immunized.

Names in the News

LONDON (AP) — Former Beatle John Lennon has criticized his ex-wife Cynthia for saying their marriage began to collapse after he took his first trip on LSD, according to a London newspaper.

A letter bearing Lennon's name and printed in today's Daily Express said the marriage was "long over before the advent of LSD or Yoko Ono," the Japanese artist who became Lennon's second wife. The Express said the letter was delivered to the offices of some British newspapers in New York, where the Lennons live.

Cynthia, who was recently quoted in a magazine interview, has remarried and now lives in Wales.

LONDON (AP) — Former British Prime Minister Harold Wilson may give up his House of Commons seat and take an appointment at a university in Israel, the Daily Mail newspaper reported today.

Columnist Nigel Dempster said Wilson would welcome the chance to spend six months a year lecturing on government and world affairs at somewhere like the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. He has had enough of being a lawmaker after 31 years in the House, the report said.

There was no immediate comment on the report from Wilson, who resigned the premiership and leadership of the governing Labor party last March.

The state also may build a visitors center on the edge of town and bring people in by bus or tram in order to unravel traffic jams and preserve parking space for Plains' 683 permanent residents.

Southeast Missourian sold to Thompson chain

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Purchase of The Southeast Missourian by Thomson Newspapers, Inc., was announced Wednesday by Harry Naeter, the newspaper's publisher.

Hugh Hollister, general manager of The Missourian, will be named publisher.

St. Clair McCabe, executive vice president of the Thomson group, emphasized there will be no changes in either the policies or the personnel of The Missourian.

The Thomson organization, which owns newspapers across the United States, including the recent purchase of the Carthage Press in southwest Missouri, is headquartered in Des Plaines, Ill.

K. R. Thomson, president of the newspaper group, said "We make it a point of not interfering with local editorial policies. It is my belief that a newspaper publisher should observe two basic principles: That the newspaper serve the best interests of the community, and in doing so, tell the truth."

The Missourian has operated as a family- owned enterprise since 1904, when Fred and George Naeter, brothers who were printers in St. Louis, came here and purchased a weekly newspaper with a $425 down payment.

George Naeter died in 1956 and Fred Naeter in 1965. The business has been conducted since that time by Harry Naeter, son of the third brother, who joined the paper soon after its purchase. The elder Harry Naeter died as a young man in 1918 shortly after the son's birth.

Naeter said the decision to sell The Missourian after 74 years was difficult.

The Missourian was founded almost by accident. George and Fred Naeter, printers in St. Louis after newspaper work in their home town of Shelbina and elsewhere, caught a boat to Cape Girardeau on a weekend excursion in 1904.

They walked over the city and up to the Normal School Campus where they met the late B. F. Johnson, mathematics professor. Learning they were newspapermen, he persuaded them that they should acquire a defunct paper here.

They were able, through the help of the late M. E. Leming and others, to raise $425 capital as down payment and purchased the Cape Girardeau Republican, housed in the Old Opera House building. There were three other papers here then, but they soon expired. Harry Naeter joined the brothers soon after the newspaper was established on Oct. 3, 1904.

The Missourian has been housed in a number of places — the Wilson Building at Broadway and Spanish, then in its own building whichlater became the Chamber of Commerce structure which was razed a couple of years ago. they stayed there until 1925 when the present Missourian Building was erected.

Friday's over view in the news

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Otis, an 18-inch octopus who lives in a sea water aquarium at the Seafarer restaurant, had its name changed to Iris after it laid about 5,000 eggs.

Restaurant owner Clarence Cash said he has already lined up four foster homes in anticipation of the mass hatching and is looking for 4,996 more.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Frank and Cathy Hasenauer's travel agency caters to jet-set pets, offering everything from airline tickets to health papers for animals whose owners let them travel.

"We arrange their traveling, planning, boarding, health papers, pickup and delivery," says Hasenauer, who operates out of an abandoned military base near the Los Angeles International Airport. "We just don't have any liveried drivers, that's all, no limos."

He said the agency has boarding facilities, but "no frills, just comfort. Nothing extra, like padded cells, or padded runs. No piped-in music."

Hasenauer said he and his wife have helped owners import and export "race horses, hippopotami, cattle, swine, birds and just about any kind of animal you can name." Their clients include about 200 dogs and cats a month, most of them accompanying their masters in a move or long journey, he said.

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Barry Rosen says his mother "doesn't exactly approve" of her son from the Bronx wrestling steers on the rodeo circuit.

"She thinks her Jewish son should be a school teacher. She thinks I'm crazy, that somewhere along the line she must have dropped me on my head," said Rosen, 27, who claims to have a master's degree from New York's Juilliard School of Music.

"It's kind of strange being a Jewish cowboy from the Bronx," he said.

From the time he was 6 his sole ambition was to be the "best darn trumpet player in the world," Rosen said, but instead he drifted into the world of rodeos after participating in an amateur event and now says he's "addicted."

Thanksgiving Roundup for 1976

By The Associated Press

At the first Thanksgiving 355 years ago, the Pilgrims gave thanks for their first harvest after surviving the New England winter.

On Thursday, as 100 modern Pilgrims re-enacted the ceremony in a Miami church, the Rev. Harold Davenport gave a different kind of thanks to his costumed congregation:

"I want to thank you all," he told the group, many of them wearing big white collars and black knee britches. "It takes a lot of courage to dress up like this in these outfits."

Another Thanksgiving commemoration wasn't so lighthearted. In Plymouth, Mass., while townsfolk and tourists feasted on 800 pounds of turkey, some 150 descendants of New England Indian tribes gathered to mourn the changes of the past three centuries.

"Yesterday we walked our forests free of boundaries," said Wamsutta, a descendant of the Wampanoag tribe also known as Frank Jones. "Today we walk your macadam roads and live in your concrete houses. But our spirit refuses to die."

But the Abnaki Indians of Vermont and the Creeks of Alabama had cause for celebration.

Gov. Thomas Salmon signed an executive order giving the Abnakis tribal status, "one of the greatest Thanksgiving gifts that could have been given to the Indians of Vermont," said Chief Walter Watso. It means the 1,700 Abnakis may work toward legislation to regain the land and hunting and fishing rights they seek.

In Poarch, Ala., local Creeks put on their 6th annual Creek Indian Pow Wow. About 1,000 persons, perhaps half of them with full or part Indian blood, attended.

"For many, it's a starting point," said Bill Smith, a construction worker who teaches native dances. "We're trying to bring back the sense of heritage that was lost."

Other Americans, including President Ford and President-elect Jimmy Carter, enjoyed traditional Thanksgiving dinners. Many who had no families dined well — and often free — on hundreds of turkeys prepared in restaurants and shelters for the poor and elderly.

Ford slept late, watched televised football games, swam in the heated outdoor pool at Camp David, Md., and ate a turkey dinner with 15 relatives and family friends. Earlier, he telephoned members of his high school football team, holding their annual reunion in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Rosalynn Carter cooked a turkey with cornbread stuffing for 11 members of the Carter clan. Carter made no public appearance.

Chicago restaurateur Ismet Deletioglu, a Turkish immigrant who said he wanted to share his success with the "elderly, poor, hungry or homeless," served free turkey dinners.

The light side of religion

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Dick Maresh is a sheet metal worker, not a theologian, but lately he's been talking to a lot of people who want to learn about the Catholic Liberal Church.

Maresh is repairing the copper tower of the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church. A telephone was installed in the tower for his convenience, but the telephone company listed the number in its directory under the heading "Churches-Catholic Liberal."

That heading has not previously been used, and no one at the phone company seems to know why the listing appeared.

"You'd be surprised how many calls I get," Maresh said. Some callers are merely curious, he said. But others "are fed up with their priest or the church and want to try something different."

Religion in the News

Congress includes more Jews, Catholics, fewer Protestants

NEW YORK (AP) — The new U.S. Congress includes more Roman Catholics and Jews than the outgoing House and Senate, but fewer Protestants.

Although the changes in the denominational ratio are small, they continue a trend that has gone on for some time, bringing the religious makeup of Congress closer into line with that of the population.

Statistics compiled by the evangelical fortnightly, Christianity Today, show there are 371 Protestants in the new Congress, down nine; 129 Roman Catholics, up six, and 27 Jews, up three.

The Roman Catholic and Jewish totals are record highs for both groups.

Five members of the new Congress were listed as unaffiliated with any religious body.

In the present makeup, Roman Catholics constitute about 25 per cent and Jews about 3 per cent of Congress, approximately their proportion of the general population. Protestants hold about 70 per cent of the seats in Congress.

That's about their share of the population according to survey samplings, although the actively participating membership in Protestant churches is only about 40 per cent of the population.

In the new Congress, including both House and Senate, Presbyterians were down six to 60; United Methodists down three to 80, the United Church of Christ down 3 to 22; Episcopalians down two to 64, Baptists down one to 55 and Unitarian-Universalists down two to 11.

Lutherans, however, were up two to 16; the Churches of Christ up two to six; Latter-day Saints churches up two to 12. The Christian Church (Disciplines of Christ) stayed the same with five members in Congress. Eastern Orthodoxy also kept the same number of seats, four.

"BELONGING TO ONE ANOTHER"

The Gospel Lads Quartet will hold a revival at First Christian Church in East Prairie Nov. 29 to Dec. 5. The group is to present a concert at each meeting at 7:30 p.m. and during the morning worship service Dec. 5. The light side of religion

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Dick Maresh is a sheet metal worker, not a theologian, but lately he's been talking to a lot of people who want to learn about the Catholic Liberal Church.

Maresh is repairing the copper tower of the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church. A telephone was installed in the tower for his convenience, but the telephone company listed the number in its directory under the heading "Churches-Catholic Liberal."

That heading has not previously been used, and no one at the phone company seems to know why the listing appeared.

"You'd be surprised how many calls I get," Maresh said. Some callers are merely curious, he said. But others "are fed up with their priest or the church and want to try something different."

Religion in the News

Congress includes more Jews, Catholics, fewer Protestants

NEW YORK (AP) — The new U.S. Congress includes more Roman Catholics and Jews than the outgoing House and Senate, but fewer Protestants.

Although the changes in the denominational ratio are small, they continue a trend that has gone on for some time, bringing the religious makeup of Congress closer into line with that of the population.

Statistics compiled by the evangelical fortnightly, Christianity Today, show there are 371 Protestants in the new Congress, down nine; 129 Roman Catholics, up six, and 27 Jews, up three.

The Roman Catholic and Jewish totals are record highs for both groups.

Five members of the new Congress were listed as unaffiliated with any religious body.

In the present makeup, Roman Catholics constitute about 25 per cent and Jews about 3 per cent of Congress, approximately their proportion of the general population. Protestants hold about 70 per cent of the seats in Congress.

That's about their share of the population according to survey samplings, although the actively participating membership in Protestant churches is only about 40 per cent of the population.

In the new Congress, including both House and Senate, Presbyterians were down six to 60; United Methodists down three to 80, the United Church of Christ down 3 to 22; Episcopalians down two to 64, Baptists down one to 55 and Unitarian-Universalists down two to 11.

Lutherans, however, were up two to 16; the Churches of Christ up two to six; Latter-day Saints churches up two to 12. The Christian Church (Disciplines of Christ) stayed the same with five members in Congress. Eastern Orthodoxy also kept the same number of seats, four.

Five years ago: The United States disclosed the largest trade deficit with other countries since World War II.

One year ago: President Ford reversed a previous policy and supported legislation that would help New York City scrape through a financial crisis.

New house majority leader wants more bills considered

By TERRY JUDD
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — On the final night of the 1967 legislative session Rep. Joe D. Holt, D-Fulton, got into a disagreement with Rep. Kenneth J. Rothman, D-Clayton, over a second judgeship for the 13th judicial circuit.

Even though Holt lost that vote, he gained respect for Rothman that still lingers today. That is for the best since Holt will be working with Rothman this legislative session as the new majority floor leader.

Holt takes over the majority floor leader position from Rothman, who held the position four years, since Rothman will become the new Speaker of the House. Holt believes they will work well together as a leadership team.

"That is not to say we're going to agree on everything, but I think when we disagree we can work out our differences without getting mad at each other," Holt says. "God knows, we've had the opportunity for this to occur before."

But disagreements with Rothman are the least of Holt's concerns. The majority floor leader traditionally has been the person responsible for directing proposed legislation in the House.

"It's a job that has been and is one that controls the flow of legislation," Holt says. "It can be used as a position that provides a bottleneck, slows things down, or one that opens things wide and allows a lot of legislation to move."

Holt wants to use his position to open up the flow of legislation despite the "mountains" of bills the House faces each session. He believes both parties' legislation should have an equal chance of being considered.

To speed up the flow, Holt would like to see a greater separation of priority and nonpriority legislation. He believes nonpriority legislation, if placed on the same calendar as priority legislation, slows up the legislative process.

Nonpriority legislation is local in nature and generally noncontroversial, Holt says. For example, a bill granting funds to a specific county drainage system probably would be nonpriority legislation.

Priority legislation would apply to the state as a whole and would be more controversial, including bills like the Equal Rights Amendment, legislative modernization or reassessing of property taxes.

Most nonpriority bills are placed on the consent calendar. That is, the bill remains on the calendar for five legislative days. If there are no written objections from five members, the bill is advanced in the House toward final passage.

Holt would like to rename the consent calendar the local calendar. Here, bills of local importance would be discussed quickly and advanced to final passage.

Normally, nonpriority bills are placed on the consent calendar. Holt would like to eliminate the consent calendar and rename it the local calendar. Here, bills of local importance could be quickly discussed and advanced to the third reading, where final passage occurs.

Holt says while this is not the total answer to the sluggish flow of legislation, it would help.

"I have some control by virtue of the calendar to make sure the priority legislation gets considered on a priority basis," Holt says. "But at the same time I've got to balance the factor of other legislation that is of some importance to a local area.

"Making the decision of which one of those is going to be considered, when you've got 163 people who think their legislation is vitally important to them — that's the tough problem."

Holt is sympathetic to local legislation because like the other House members he represents a district. In his ten years in the House, Holt has protected the Fulton State Hospital and has resisted the trend toward community mental health centers as opposed to large institutions.

Even though he is majority leader, Holt plans to continue to care for his district, although he is aware of the problems he will face.

"I've got to make it clear that what I say about a particular matter regarding my district is not a reflection upon my floor leadership position," he says.

"I'm not naive enough to think that just because I'm in a leadership position the people of opposite positions are going to roll over and play dead, because I know darn well that just isn't going to happen."

Besides local bills, Holt has been an active lawmaker. In the 1975 and 1976 sessions he has introduced legislation to reduce the size and age requirements of the House, reform the public defender system, establish an environmental surveillance program to monitor radiation levels and set requirements on the sites of major energy facilities.

The 36-year-old lawyer has been active in House committees also. Last session, Holt was chairman of the Special Committee on Modernization. In addition he has served on the appropriations, fiscal affairs and judiciary committees. Holt also was chairman of the appropriations subcommittee on social services.

Holt expects the coming legislative session to be equally busy and interesting for him. He believes the major issues the House will face this year will be capital punishment, the possibility of a Missouri presidential primary, herbicide and pesticide controls, education financing, elimination of sales tax on drugs and reforms in corrections.

Holt is hoping that he can contribute to that quality through his leadership. "Certainly I want to be remembered as someone who was capable, who was able to do the job, who was fair and honest.

New house majority leader wants more bills considered

By TERRY JUDD
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — On the final night of the 1967 legislative session Rep. Joe D. Holt, D-Fulton, got into a disagreement with Rep. Kenneth J. Rothman, D-Clayton, over a second judgeship for the 13th judicial circuit.

Even though Holt lost that vote, he gained respect for Rothman that still lingers today. That is for the best since Holt will be working with Rothman this legislative session as the new majority floor leader.

Holt takes over the majority floor leader position from Rothman, who held the position four years, since Rothman will become the new Speaker of the House. Holt believes they will work well together as a leadership team.

"That is not to say we're going to agree on everything, but I think when we disagree we can work out our differences without getting mad at each other," Holt says. "God knows, we've had the opportunity for this to occur before."

But disagreements with Rothman are the least of Holt's concerns. The majority floor leader traditionally has been the person responsible for directing proposed legislation in the House.
